SISSON NEAR MURDER SPOT, MAN SAYS

RECORD CROWD VISITS CAPITAL ON EASTER DAY

Estimates Set Number of Tourists in the City at 100,000.

CHERRY BLOSSOMS ATTRACTION TO MANY

President Hoover Leads Residents to Worship in Morning.

TRAFFIC IS BLOCKED AROUND HIS CHURCH

8,000 Attend Sunrise Rites at Walter Reed, and 12,000 at Cathedral.

In accordance with the custom of Easter, the weather man yesterday appeared in best clothes, to the delight of approximately 100,000 visitors and hordes of residents in the National Capital.

A record was believed to have been set in the number of tourists who made the annual pilgrimage to Washington. Eleven excursion trains, several in two or three sections, brought more than 15,000 into the capital, railway officials estimated. A score or more motor buses carried in hundreds more.

The cherry blossoms, whose gorgeous deep pink and white petals offered stiking contrast to the green of the grass and shrubbery around Hains Point and the Potomac Park Speedway, were the center of attention. Automobiles crowded each other along the boulevard from the middle of the morning until well after sunset.

Church was the order of the morning for the majority of men and women. Following the lead of President Hoover, they packed the pews of almost every church in the city. And after the services they promenaded or rode around, eyeing each other's new clothes or corsages.

Mrs. Hoover Absent.

Sight-seeing bus companies, taxicabs, and even commercial airplanes, did capacity business. Special police were required to keep traffic from becoming hopelessly congested.

The President was compelled to attend the Easter service at the Irving street Friends Meeting House without Mrs. Hoover because the First Lady has not yet recovered from a fall, in which her back was painfully wrenched.

The Quaker church was unornamented and undecorated except by a large vase of Easter lilies in front of the pulpit. The service opened with a period of silent meditation after which Dr. Augustus T. Murray, the pastor, led a prayer.

Two women ministers preceded Dr Murray on the platform with brief talks. The pastor told in simple effective language the story of the Resurrection, recalling Christ's words: "He that believeth in Me has life." The service closed with another talk by a visiting Philadelphia minister and a brief period of meditation.

Mrs. Hoover Gets Lilies.

So great were the crowds of visitors that flocked around the meeting house to see the President that traffic had to be shunted during the service.

A pot of lilies, which he selected himself, was the Chief Executive's Easter present to Mrs. Hoover.

In the afternoon Mr. Hoover, with his brother and sister-in-law, Dean and Mrs. Theodore Jesse Hoover, of the Stanford University School of Engineering, motored through Potomac Park to view the cherry blossoms.

Despite the early hour the sunrise services at Walter Reed Hospital, Temple Heights, and the new Universalist National Memorial Church were attended by thousands of worshipers. The Washington Cathedral, St. Gabriel's and other citadels drew hundreds to their Easter ceremonies Six hundred Red Cross workers, Army nurses and corps men added color to the Walter Reed garden amphitheater service by forming a "living cross" with their white uniforms.

Service Draws 8,000.

The hospital service drew almost 8,000 persons. Col. Julian E. Yates, chief of chaplains, U. S. A., preached the sermon, and the Army Band played sacred music.

More than 12,000 persons attended services or visited the Washington Cathedral alone yesterday. All three of the beautiful crypt chapels were put to use, services being held at 7:30, 9:30, 10, 11 and 4 o'clock.

So great were the crowds that the picturesque amphitheater was used for the overflow. An actual count

Lindberghs Set Mark For Coast-Coast Hop

Land at New York Shortly After 11 o'Clock, Completing High Altitude Flight From California; Shatter Hawks' Record.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., April 20 (A.P.).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh tonight completed their experimental, one-stop, high-altitude flight across the continent. They landed here at 11:11 o'clock, Eastern standard time, beating Capt. Frank M. Hawks' best time for nonstop West-East flight.

The famous flier and his wife lopped 3 hours 16 minutes and 6 seconds off the record of 17 hours 38 minutes 56 seconds set by Capt. Hawks last June 29.

Wichita, Kans., April 20 (A.P.).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, on a transcontinental high altitude flight, arrived here at 2:20:30 p. m. today in their high speed monoplane after a flight from Glendale, Calif. After refueling their low wing ship and receiving weather reports, they took off for New York at 2:42:35 p. m. During the brief stop at the airport Mrs. Lindbergh did not get out of the plane.

Col. Lindbergh said he hoped to be in New York in eight hours as no stops were planned between Wichita and Roosevelt Field, N. Y. The plane took off into a northwestern wind and climbed slowly.

A crowd of approximately 5,000 persons was at the airport here to cheer the arrival of the noted flier and his wife, after the fast flight from Glendale, which was made in 6 hours 56 minutes and 10 seconds.

Col. Lindbergh said he kept the ship at an altitude above 10,000 feet on practically the entire trip. Mrs. Lindbergh said she was having a good time acting as her husband's navigator assistant. The flier said he expected to fly at altitudes of from 10,000 to 20,000 feet on the remainder of the trip. The flight, he explained, is an experiment to test the possibilities of using higher air currents for fast express and passenger planes.

Two hundred and forty-five gallons of gasoline and 14 gallons of oil were loaded on the ship here.

F. K. Peterson, United States Weather Bureau forecaster here, told Col. Lindbergh of bad weather ahead. The flier must pass through a storm area extending from northern Illinois to northern Louisiana, with low ceilings at Kansas City and St. Louis.

Col. Lindbergh, however, explained that in flying at high altitudes he expected to pass above the storm.

Wichita was the only stop scheduled on the transcontinental flight, and Col Lindbergh indicated that he would continue to follow the Great Circle route, which would take him north of St. Louis and north of Columbus, Ohio. The flier said that quite likely his plane would fly so high it would not be seen as it passes over cities and towns.

MAN IS NEAR DEATH FOLLOWING ATTACK

Two Arrested Near Savage Said to Have Admitted Brutal Assault.

ARE HELD WITHOUT BOND

A possibly fatal attack on James Sherran, 65 years old, a huckster, while he was seated on the front porch of his home at Savage, Md., Saturday night, led to the arrest yesterday of two Laurel men, both of whom admitted that they slugged Sherran into insensibility with an automobile crank handle, according to Maryland State Policeman C. C. Serman.

They gave their names as Russell Slater, 25 years old, and George Baley, 22 years old. Upon their arrest by the policeman they were taken before Justice of the Peace Howard U. Gosnell, of Savage, who ordered them held without bond on charges of assault with intent to kill, pending the outcome of the injuries of Sherran, who is in a critical condition at St. Agnes' Hospital in Baltimore suffering from a fractured skull and concussion of the brain.

The men were lodged in the Howard County Jail at Ellicott City. The policeman reported that the two men admitted that they assaulted Sherran in the hope of seizing money reputed to be kept at the house.

Sherran revived a short time after the attack and crawled to the Baltimore Boulevard in front of his home where he was found. Sherran is a well-known figure in marketing truck farm products in Laurel and the surrounding countryside.

ROBINSON SAYS NAVY PACT OFFERS PARITY

Safeguard Clause Is Upheld as Maintaining Fleets' Relative Sizes.

U. S. HEARS RADIO TALK

(Associated Press.)

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader of the Senate and member of the United States delegation to the London Naval Conference, said yesterday in a radio address from London that the proposed naval treaty offers parity between the United States and Great Britain in battleships, destroyers and submarines and offers the United States the option of a "ton for ton" cruiser parity with Great Britain.

The text of his speech, carried over the National Broadcasting Co. network, was made public by the State Department.

Senator Robinson said the American delegation went into the parley with five objectives: "To cooperate with other delegations in terminating naval competition by limiting all classes of warships; to assure equality of naval strength for the United States with Great Britain; to arrange a satisfactory relation between American and Japanese naval forces, and to bring about reductions in tonnage wherever practicable."

As a five-power enterprise, Senator Robinson said, "there is not complete success."

"The importance of this," he added, "is not to be minimized. Unquestionably it would have been more satisfactory to have a treaty defining the programs of France and Italy as well as those of Great Britain, the United States and Japan."

"No delegation," he added, "asked the United States to participate in

Thousands Made Homeless By Typhoon in Philippines

Hurricane of Unusual Intensity Sweeps 14 Towns on Small Island and Toll of Dead Is Expected to Be High; Aid Is Rushed.

Manila, April 20 (A.P.).—A destructive typhoon swept fourteen towns on the island of Leyte Friday, virtually demolishing the communities of Tolosa and Dulag on the east coast.

Thousands were made homeless and the number of dead and injured was not ascertainable.

First reports of the disaster reached Manila 48 hours later when Gov. de la Cruz of Leyte wired the American Red Cross here: "Please secure immediate aid for thousands homeless people, especially food, clothing and building materials."

The typhoon was of small area but of unusual intensity. It came as a surprise to Weather Bureau officials, as such storms rarely come at this season of the year in the Philippines. The Leyte Governor's message described coconut trees in the devastated areas as standing like candles with their tops blown off. The entire crop was destroyed.

Many towns in the devastated region have been completely cut off with telephone and telegraph wires down. The death toll may be large and official reports of destruction can not be completed in less than a week or more.

Gov Gen. Dwight W. Davis, who has been making a trip in the Bontoc region with his daughter, Cynthia, had not been informed of the disaster today. He is expected to return to Manila tomorrow. The Red Cross has taken action toward organizing the provincial forces of Leyte and Samar and has arranged to send doctors, nurses and relief supplies on the first vessel to leave Manila.

303 MILLIONS NEW MARK FOR PUBLIC WORKS

Total for the First Three Months Is Greatest in Five Years.

INCREASE IS TRACED TO HOOVER PROGRAM

(Associated Press.)

Public construction contracts awarded during the first three months of 1930 amounted to more than $303,000,000 and were said last night by Secretary Lamont to have broken all records for a similar period in the last five years.

The total which includes public work and public utilities construction was an increase of 55 per cent over the same quarter of last year when awards totaling $159,660,000 were made and were well ahead of the figures since 1925.

In making the announcement, the Commerce Department head said they showed concretely the results of the stabilization program initiated as a result of President Hoover's conference with business leaders and his appeal for "energetic, yet prudent pursuit" of public construction.

Railroad Building Up.

Awards for public buildings alone during the three-month period were valued at $32,337,000, an increase of 33 per cent over the corresponding period of 1929, when the total of $24,318,000 set a new record since 1925.

The greatest percentage of increase was reported in contracts awarded for lighting systems, these amounting to $20,458,000 for the first quarter, as contrasted with $5,864,000 in the first three months of 1929, a gain of 249 per cent.

Railroad construction moved upward 128 per cent from $30,973,000 to $70,648,000, and contracts awarded for hospitals and institutions 74 per cent from $22,588,000 to $39,364,000. Contracts for park development gained 127 per cent, waterfront development 73 per cent, water supply systems 70 per cent, highway 61 per

GANGSTER TRIO SHOT DEAD BY LONE GUNMAN

Slain Men All Had Police Records as Chicago Racketeers.

ASSASSIN SPEEDS AWAY IN MACHINE

Tragedy Staged in Blue Hour Saloon on Turbulent South Side.

KILLER'S IDENTITY UNKNOWN TO POLICE

Widow of One Victim Said He Had Been Living in Fear.

Chicago, April 20 (A.P.).—The quiet of Chicago's Easter morning was broken by a triple gangland execution.

A lone gunman invaded the Blue Hour saloon on the turbulent South Side, shot down Frank Del Re, alias Frank Dire, 33, and Joseph Special, 28, coproprietors of the place, and their bartender Walter Wakefield, 30. The assassin sped away in a machine without leaving a trace as to his identity and only a maze of police conjecture as to his motive.

The records of the three slain men, provided numerous reasons why they might have been removed from the underworld picture.

Del Re was listed at police headquarters as a bootlegger, racketeer, terrorist and all-around hoodlum. Special, Del Re's brother-in-law, had a similar record, while Wakefield, a former drug clerk, was a minor character. Police believe the latter was killed to seal his lips.

Saloon Has Vicious Reputation.

The saloon where the shooting occurred has long had a vicious reputation. A few years ago, Jimmy Vinci, driver of the death car in the assassination of "Mossy" Enright, labor leader, and Machine Gun Joe Granatta fought a death duel there. It was closed a while and then reopened by Del Re and Joe Genearo.

Genero was badly wounded last January 29, and violated the gangland code by naming his assailants, James Bellacastro, Angelo Lucci and Louis Delucca.

The Del Re-Genero partnership then dissolved and Del Re and Special reopened a week ago. The same night the front windows were shattered by bricks, and the word was

Navy Delegates Study Final Text of Pact

Last-Minute Dufficulties Come Up as MacDonald Hurries Back to London for Conference With Other Powers.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

London, April 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald unexpectedly cut short his holiday in Scotland today and took train for London in order to confer tomorrow with the delegates of the other powers on the final text of the treaty of London as drawn up by the committees of jurists and naval experts. While no hitch has developed sufficiently serious to cause doubt as to the treaty's signature day after tomorrow it is clear that some last-minute ifficulties have come up.

One of these may be concerned with the preamble which was altered last night by the committee of jurists. It was strengthened, three lines being written in to refer rather more by implication, although not directly, to the work of this conference being intended as a contribution to league disarmament. It is assumed that change was made at the request of the French, although the compromise between the French and the British and Americans under which neither the Kellogg pact nor the league are to be mentioned still stands.

The escalator or safeguarding clause, which constitutes Article XXI in Part III of the treaty, has been changed at Japanese request from the original American form. It provides in its final form that if any power signing Part III of the treaty is menaced by another power which does not sign that part that power may notify of its intention of building up in any category and may then build, the other signatories having the right to build the same amount.

Japanese representations, however, have led to the addition to this clause of a provision that the power desiring to build beyond treaty figures shall notify the other two powers of its reasons and that diplomatic negotiations concerning the situation arisen may then be commenced. This is taken as a way of saying Japan wants the right to be able to register a protest against increased building if she desires. These last provisions were not in the clause as originally agreed between Secretary of State Stimson, Premier MacDonald and First Lord of the Admiralty A. V Alexander.

Dispatches from Tokyo state that instructions to sign the treaty have been sent from there to former Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki, head of the Japanese delegation at London.

In summarizing the naval treaty this morning the New York World News Service for rather curious reasons, was compelled to omit one article of the twenty-five of which the treaty consists. Part I of the treaty, Articles 1 to V, Part II, containing Articles VI to XIII, and the three-power agreement in Part III covering Articles XIV to XXI were sketched, as was Part V, the last part of the treaty, containing Articles XXIII to XXV.

The article omitted, which stands alone as Part IV of the treaty, was Article XXII, and consists merely of

CASSIDY DESCRIBES MEXICAN KIDNAPING

PARTY LOST IN JUNGLE

Mexico City, April 20 (A.P.).—Leonard B. Cassidy, American employe of the Transcontinental Fruit Co., arrived in Mexico City today on his way home after getting away from a group of men who kidnaped him last Tuesday, and released him only after many times threatening to kill him.

Mr. Cassidy told the Associated Press that he was going straight to Peabody, Mass., for rest and recuperation. He said that for more than 36 hours he had been under constant threat and fear of death, with revolvers pressed to his head or back, while being held in the vicinity of Tuxtepec, State of Oaxaca.

After a month's rest at home, he plans to return to his work again in Mexico.

His escape with his life, he attributes to the fact that the bandits held nothing against him personally and to the fact that he speaks Spanish and understands the Latin temperament.

Since his release, the government has announced that troops under Gen. Felix Gonzales have caught Fernando Ramirez, Esteban Pena and Gustavo Cruz Silva, three of Cassidy's kindnapers, and executed them. They were young fellows whose ages ranged from 23 to 25.

According to Mr. Cassidy's own story, he was at a fruit-loading station twelve miles from Tuxtepec when the three men came to his office and said they wanted to talk to him.

"As soon as they entered they seized my gun, covered me, cut the telephone wires and ripped out the telephone," he said. "A few minutes later we started into the jungle.

"At first the kidnapers were very ugly, constantly telling me they were going to kill me. The situation was very bad for the first two hours, but after that I kept talking to them and telling them it was useless to kill me for they would not get a ransom. Finally they began treating me better.

"About nightfall we arrived at the hut of an old Indian, and with a gun jammed in my ribs I was forced to tell him we were out hunting and wanted a place to sleep for the night and food.

"At 4 a. m. the next day the Indian came to our camping spot in a swamp

Valleys of Moon Menace Plans to Picture Eclipse

Mile-Deep Troughs, If They Happen to Lie at Edge of Lunar Body, May Upset Schemes of Astronomers to Make Photographs.

Cambridge, Mass., April 20 (A.P.).—Of all the gambling chances taken by American astronomers to photograph a sun's eclipse, the biggest one comes a week hence. This time a joker—valleys a mile deep on the moon—is added to the usual uncertainties likely to spoil sight of an eclipse.

Possibly never before have the valleys on the moon threatened to interfere directly with man's earthly plans, because the eclipse which will sweep over the far West about noon Monday, April 28, is of a rare kind.

It is exceedingly small, a black shadow, round as a dollar, only half a mile across, traveling nearly 1,600 miles an hour, its total land path about 1,000 miles from just north of San Francisco to the Montana State line—at best a tiny target to shoot at through the usual cloud barrages. It lasts barely more than one second at one place.

In addition, its exact position is in doubt. Due to infinitesimal uncertainties about motions of sun, moon and earth, hence astronomers are setting up their cameras in a wide belt.

But the valleys of the moon may undo all this preparation. The authorities for this are Dr. Ernest W. Brown, of Yale, and Dr. Willard J Fisher, of Harvard.

This eclipse is tiny because the moon just barely covers the sun's face. If a mile-deep valley happens to lie exactly on the edge of the moon, light shining earthward through this trough, Dr. Brown says, is likely to interfere with the expected half-mile-wide shadow.

"We have plenty of evidence," he says, "of valleys on the limb of the

SALESMAN PICKED OUT AS SELLER OF COAT, WATCH ON NIGHT OF SLAYING

Virginian's Family Engages Counsel, Who Asserts Police Must Free Client Today or Answer Habeas Corpus Action.

WORKMAN ON BRIDGE TELLS OF PURCHASING ARTICLES

Nine Others Present Saw Suspect Wait Until He Went for Money, He Declares; Authorities Hope Number on Timepiece Will Aid Hunt.

After Mervin Sisson, Warsaw, Va., salesman, had been identified yesterday as having been near the place of the Mary Baker murder on the night of the crime, members of the family last night retained counsel to fight for his release and authorities sought to confirm the identification.

Naming of Sisson by Charles Quertermous as the man who had sold him a watch and a topcoat near the Highway Bridge on April 11 stood out yesterday as one of the most startling developments since the body of Mary Baker was found near Arlington Cemetery on April 12.

Immediately after the identification police sought to support Quertermous' sensational recognition. James R. Duncan, attorney, of Alexandria, who was retained by the Sisson family, countered this move with the assertion that authorities will be given until noon today to release his client or answer a writ of habeas corpus.

Picture Is Recognized.

Quertermous asserted that nine men who had talked with the man for 15 minutes on a pier under the Highway Bridge on the night of the murder, would sustain his identification of Sisson. All of them, he said, recognized a picture of Sisson as the man who had sold Quertermous the topcoat and watch.

Quertermous, who is foreman of a gang of pipefitters now working on a job under the Highway Bridge, unhesitatingly picked Sisson from a line-up yesterday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock in the Arlington County Jail as the man he had seen near the place the night of the murder.

When Quertermous picked him out of the group, Sisson said, "I've seen you somewhere before."

"Yes," replied the other, "you saw me the Friday night that you sold me that topcoat and watch."

Knowledge of Sale Denied.

Sisson denied knowledge of the sale. The coat was bought in a Washington store, of which it bears a label. A search was immediately instituted for the watch.

As soon as the watch is found, its numbers checked, and inscriptions examined, police are sure that they will be able to determine whether Sisson is more closely connected with the crime than was thought late Saturday night.

Sisson had virtually reached the threshold of freedom when the identification was made by Quertermous. A day after his arrest at his Warsaw Va., home, police were confident that his alibi was puncture-proof.

Another Fails to Select Suspect.

Alonzo Lloyd, a coworker on the job with Quertermous, viewed the same lineup of men directly after Quertermous, but failed to recognize Sisson. Lloyd said after that the man to whom he had talked had worn a hat and a topcoat and that if the men in the group had attired themselves in hat and coats, that he might be able to pick out the suspect.

Quertermous told a Post reporter yesterday that he was working on a pier with a gang of pipe fitters about 8:45 on the night of the murder. He separated from his group and a man in a topcoat and hat passed him as he made his way toward the highway, he said. The man approached from the south side of the span.

The stranger asked them if they cared to buy a watch and topcoat. None of them had enough money and they referred the stranger to Quertermous.

Wanted to Buy Gasoline, Claim.

The man told Quertermous that his automobile was stranded. It had run out of gasoline, he said, and he wanted to reach home. He showed a gold watch with a gold chain and a locket attached. The man said he would be able to get at least $40 for it at a pawnshop.

Quertermous said he would have to go to his home at 629 North Columbus street, Alexandria, for money, as he had none with him. He offered the stranger $10 for the watch and $5 for the coat. Without any more bargaining the man asked him how long it would take to get the money, he said.

Quertermous went to Alexandria for the money, and left the stranger at the scene. Before he left Quertermous suggested to the man that he accept enough money for gasoline and that he would hold the watch as security for its return.

On Way From Florida, Claim.

The man volunteered to Quertermous the information that he was coming from Florida to his home in Atlantic City, N. J., when he became stranded without funds.

While Quertermous was en route to his home the man talked with fellow workmen on the dredge. According to the witness, the man appeared nervous and excited and kept inquiring how long it would require for Quertermous to return.

Just as the man was leaving without the money, Quertermous appeared and the former delivered the articles. It was close to 9:10 at this time.

When the man departed, Quertermous said, he started walking in the direction of the Washington end of the bridge, in the opposite direction to the place where he had said his automobile was stranded. At that time Quertermous attached no particular significance to the act; but thought of it when he read of the Baker murder.

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Pages 2 and 16 Today.

Locket Holds No Pictures.

In the locket, which was attached to the watch, Quertermous said, there were no pictures. Several stones were set in the face of the locket in the form of a crescent. Quertermous said that the man had on low black shoes.

What puzzled Quertermous was that the man said he was anxious to get home to his wife and still refused to give his name and address so that he could redeem the watch and coat. He was well dressed and wore a gray hat, the witness said.

Because of the fact that he works from 4 o'clock to midnight each day, he did not see the newspapers which carried the story of the murder of the girl until the following Sunday.

Told Story to Policeman.

On Monday he though that the man might have had some connection with the crime and on his way to work and he told of the incident to an Arlington County policeman, stationed at Columbia pike and Mount Vernon avenue. He does not know the name of the policeman.

On Tuesday Sheriff Howard Field of Arlington County, came to the place where the men are working and took the coat.

Quertermous told a Post reporter last night that he had bought the coat for Alonzo Lloyd, one of his workmen. Lloyd kept the coat in his locker until Sheriff Fields took it away. Quertermous sold the watch to a man who he knew only as "John," who is a mate on one of the dredges near the Highway Bridge.

When the picture of Sisson were published in the newspapers, Quertermous said he discussed with his workmen the resemblance between Sisson and the man they had seen.

Alexandria Police Told.

Quertermous, who was formerly an Alexandria policeman, went to police headquarters in Alexandria and told Sergt. Edgar Simms of the incident. Together with Arlington County officers he came to Washington yesterday, where they outlined the occurrence to police.

Questermous was taken to Arlington County courthouse, Shreiff Fields, Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth, Deputy Sheriff Harry L. Woodyard, of Arlington County, and Detective Sergeant John Flaherty watched as he entered the room. Four men were in the line-up. Without hesitation Quertermous picked Sisson as the man.

Men in the line shifted their position when Quertermous left the room. He was brought in again and he touched Sisson. "This is the man," he said.

Two Identifications Fail.

In the line-up were Julian E. Gallagher, another suspect; a newspaperman, and Hugh R. Wood, of this city, who had witnessed an assault upon Miss Baker while her automobile was parked in the Ellipse on the day of the murder. Wood had failed to identify Sisson in an earlier line-up as the man who had been beating Miss Baker.

Lloyd, to whom Quertermous said he had transferred the overcoat, entered the Arlington County Jail soon after Quertermous had made his identification of Sisson. Lloyd failed to confirm the identity. Later, according to Quertermous, Lloyd said that when he saw the man from whom the purchase had been made, he wore a hat and topcoat, and therefore was unable to connect Sisson with the man in question.

An incident that may or may not prove important in connection with the identification was mentioned by Quertermous, who said that on the night the purchase was made the man, who he said is Sisson, buttoned only hte lowest coat button. Quertermous added that in pictures of Sisson he made the same observation.

Quertermous is the only one of several witnesses who have picked Sisson as the man they saw in the string of incidents prior to and immediately after the murder of Mary Baker.

J. A. Rice, who with Mr. and Mrs. Wood saw the assault in the Ellipse, could not select him as the man when he viewed him early Saturday morning following his arrival in Arlington County. Officers Oren Field and William Hammond, of the park police, could not recognize him as one of the men who had been meeting Miss Baker following her working hours in the Navy Department.

Bus Driver's Attempt Futile.

William H. Davies, a bus driver who picked up a man on the night of the crime near the place where the murder car was abandoned, could not identify Sisson as his passenger. Davies inspected a line-up last night. None of the witnesses has picked Gallagher as the man they saw with Miss Baker or near the crime scene.

Mr. Duncan, an Alexandria attorney who has been retained by Mrs. Sisson to fight for the release of the suspect, last night avowed his intention of permitting the authorities to hold his client no longer than noon today. If they do not release him at this time he will apply for a writ of habeas corpus.

Application will be made at noon to Circuit Court Judge Frederick C. Coleman, who will open the April term of the court in Arlington County today.

Defense Alibi Stressed.

Mr. Duncan averred that his client has been cooperating with the police to the fullest extent and is willing to stay in jail until they are through with him. "For every person who identifies Mr. Sisson as being near the crime," he said, "I will bring ten or twelve reputable citizens from Warsaw who will prove that he was in Warsaw on the night of the murder."

Mr. Duncan also made public the following statement: "Mrs. Sisson most emphatically deplores what she considers unfavorable newspaper notoriety in connection with the charge placed against her husband, Mervin Sisson.

"Mrs. Sisson is a person of culture and high standing in her community, as is her husband. She does not deny that her husband knew Miss Baker, but she is readby, able and willing to produce witnesses in large numbers that will corroborate the fact that Sisson was in his home continuously from Thursday until Saturday during the week of the crime."

Feels Certain of Innocence.

"Mrs. Sisson feels that any investigation at all would have conclusively convinced the proper authorities of her husband's innocense. Mrs. Sisson, like every other decent citizen abhors the atrocious murder of Miss Baker and is anxious that justice be done, but not at the expense of an innocent party.

LEWIS, GREEN RAP NAMING OF PARKER

Senator Overman Today Will Ask Judiciary Committee to Call Nominee.

WATSON SUPPORTS QUIZ

(Associated Press.)

Spokesmen of organized labor renewed their demands against confirmation of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, as an Associate Justice in statements issued yesterday as the Senate judiciary committee prepared to call the nominee before it.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asserted in his statement that a canvass of the Senate has shown the appointment has been "definitely rejected" and for that reason he said the vote on confirmation is being delayed.

John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, in a letter addressed yesterday from his headquarters in Indianapolis to members of the Senate, asked, "Why is it necessary for the President to appoint, and why is it necessary for the Senate to confirm, the elevation to the Supreme bench of Parker, the judge, who in the Red Jacket injunction suit, delivered 50,000 free Americans into indentured servitude?"

Quiz to Be Asked.

Organized labor is protesting the decision of Judge Parker upholding an injunction restraining the United Mine Workers from soliciting membership among employes who agreed not to join a union.

Today Senator Overman (Democrat), North Carolina, who is waging the contest for Judge Parker's confirmation, will move in the judiciary committee that Judge Parker be invited to appear before the committee to submit himself to examination. The nominee has volunteered to appear if invited.

The protest of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Peoples against a speech attributed to Parker when he was campaigning for governor in 1920 also is causing considerable concern in the Senate Republican ranks. Judge Parker is charged with showing racial prejudice in that speech. Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, who is still confident of Parker's confirmation, has asked that the nominee be called before the committee.

Statement by Green.

In his statement yesterday, Mr. Green said:

"The evidence is conclusive that Judge Parker believes in the 'yellow dog contract' and because he believes in the 'yellow dog contract' it is reasonable to conclude that he would sustain it and approve it if he became a member of the Supreme Court of the United States and if the issue were presented to him. This, in a large measure, is the basis of labor's objection to Judge Parker.

"The 'yellow dog contract' which Judge Parker approved and sustained in the Red Jacket Consolidated Coal & Coke Co. case has enslaved thousands of distressed workers in the coal mines of southern West Virginia. More than 300 coal corporations joined in the request for the injunction which was granted by Judge McClintic and which was sustained, on an appeal, by Judge Parker."

John L. Lewis asked, "Why lay another lash across the tortured shoulders of the struggling mine workers by placing in a position of vastly increased power, a man who regards them as industrial bondmen?"

There is no certainty that the judiciary committee today will invite Judge Parker here but because of the request by Senator Watson, the party leader, there is every indication that this course will be followed.

Man Shot Dead in Gun Fight With Police Squad

Philadelphia, April 20 (A.P.).—Police announced today that Charles Good, Negro, had been killed last night in a pistol battle with five members of the liquor-raiding squad. Fifteen bullets struck the Negro, but none of the police was injured.

The police reported that the raiding squad entered an alley where shots were being fired and were confronted by Good. He emplied his pistol at the officers and fled, reloading as he ran. Police opened fire and Good fell.

MELVILLE E. STONE HONORED BY EDITORS

Officers of Society Lay a Wreath Before Crypt of Late Journalist.

RITES CLOSE MEETING

(Associated Press.)

Paying the respects of the American Society of Newspaper Editors to the memory of Melville E. Stone, founder and former general manager of the Associated Press, officers of the organization yesterday placed a wreath before the crypt in the Washington Cathedral which contains his ashes.

Fred Fuller Shedd, of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, president of the society, and Walter M. Harrison, editor of the Oklahoma City Oklahoman and the Oklahoma City Times, former president, placed the wreath.

"On behalf of a free press," said Mr. Harrison as he placed the token, "I lay this wreath in tribute to the memory of Melville E. Stone, whose work will live as long as time runs. Will you join me in a moment of silent respect to the man whose work has done so much for our profession?"

The editors stood silently before the crypt for a short time and then paid their respects to Mrs. Stone and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Stone, who had attended the ceremonies.

A bronze tablet commemorating the memory of Mr. Stone, which has just been unveiled in Bethlehem Chapel of the Cathedral, was viewed by thousands of visitors yesterday. Placed above the crypt in the west wall of the little chapel, the tablet of simple design, is inscribed:

"1848-1929. Melville Elijah Stone, a great journalist. 'The truth shall make you free.' St. John viii:32."

The ashes of Mr. Stone were committed to the crypt of the chapel last March after services attended by President Hoover and other high officials. The right of sepulcher, alongside the tomb of Woodrow Wilson, Admiral Dewey, Ambassador Henry White and others, was offered the family of Mr. Stone in recognition of his part in the advancement of American and international journalism.

The brief ceremony at the cathedral closed the eighth annual conference.

Wilbur Asks New Deal for Indians

Secretary Tells Radio Hearers Present Conditions Ban Good Administration.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Wilbur declared in a radio address last night that "plain, common sense administration of the affairs of the Indian is not possible under present conditions, since much that should be done by administration is done by legislation."

The Secretary, who, upon becoming a member of the Hoover Cabinet, inaugurated a policy of gradually weaning the Indian from Governmental guardianship, said there was a real opportunity at the present time for "constructive legislation by Congress which should open the way to more efficient operation of the problems of the Indian."

"We must view the position of the Government as that of a trustee caring for the person and the property of a ward, but as a trustee it must be the endeavor of the Government to secure the gradual transfer to the ward of all of the normal functions of American citizenship," he said.

Colombia's Chief Reaches New York

Dr. Enrique Olaya on Way to Washington After Successful Race.

New York, April 20 (A.P.).—Dr. Enrique Olaya, president-elect of the Republic of Colombia, arrived here today aboard the United Fruit liner Ulua. He was met by a presidential salute of 21 guns and a reception committee representing the Nation, city and business leaders.

Dr. Olaya expects to be in Washington until the last week in July, when he will sail for Colombia. He is still Minister to the United States, not yet having tendered his resignation. He left this country some time ago to be present at the elections in his own land.

He said he would work for more cooperation between the United States and Colombia. Asked if his program would be one of open door for foreign investors, he said: "Quite so—of course in accord with the Colombian laws."

TARIFF BILL IGNORES AGRARIANS, IS CLAIM

Democrats Begin Assault as Conferees Agree on All but Five Rates.

HOOVER SIGNING IS SEEN

(Associated Press.)

Timing their statements with the agreement reached by the conferees on all except five rates in the tariff bill, Democrats yesterday began an assault on the rewritten measure which is certain to be carried to the floors of both chambers.

Senator Wheeler, of Montana, and Representative Garner, of Texas, the House minority leader and one of the conferees, asserted the six Republicans on the conference committee had ignored agriculture in adjusting the differences between the two houses and had accepted the highest rate on manufactured commodities in virtually all instances where the Senate and House rates did not conform.

"The bill as it is about to be reported out of conference," Senator Wheeler said, "is bereft of aid to the important agricultural West, while it spreads a veritable feast for the industries of the East already overstuffed with protection benefits."

Representative Garner said "agriculture, as usual, has been ignored by the tariff manipulators, who in a few days have undone the work accomplished by the Senate coalition in behalf of the farmers and consumers."

Senator Wheeler predicted that President Hoover would sign the bill "regardless of its gross inequalities" and that the export debenture provision incorporated by the Senate would be "stricken out at the instance of the President."

"There is convincing evidence," Wheeler added, "that objectionable as is this tariff bill it does not meet with the disapproval of President Hoover. He must have known in advance of its writing that Republican leadership in Congress would put up to him exactly the kind of bill to be reported by the conference committee."

Scores High Rates.

"Functioning as an irresistible coalition," the Montanan said, "the Republican conferees compelled acceptance of House rates whenever they happened to be higher than the rates proposed in the Senate bill and wherever the Senate rates were higher than the House rates they were substituted for the latter."

What this country needs, he said, is "not higher tariffs, but to develop markets outside the United States."

Garner said the "trading for the highest rates" had created an anomalous situation.

"A check by the Tariff Commission experts," he added, "reveals that in at least three of the schedules—all textiles—the average of rates approved by the conference is actually higher than the average for the same schedules in either the House or Senate bill. The explanation for this is that the conferees accepted only the highest rates of both bills."

Discrimination Against Farming.

The Texan said only one item in the wool schedule was reduced below existing law and that was Oriental rugs, while rugs within reach of persons of moderate means were increased in duty from 34.70 to 40.60 per cent.

"In practically every instance in which it was necessary to fix a compensatory duty," he added, "which is presumed to cover in the manufactured article the duty placed on the raw material, there has been rank discrimination against agriculture.

"This has been most marked in the rates placed on leather goods, shoes and wool manufactures. Hides are given a rate of 10 per cent, but the rates on leather and shoes would justify 20 to 25 per cent on hides."

Instead of a limited revision to place agriculture on a parity with industry, Garner said, the "representatives of industry are forcing through Congress a general revision carrying industrial rates that are indefensible.

The conferees will begin today the settlement of difference over the administrative provisions of the bill.

Cold Climate Plants Unsurpassed in Beauty

Laramie, Wyo., April 20 (A.P.).—Alpine and subalpine plants have won out in a hazardous environment, says Dr. Aven Nelson, of the University of Wyoming.

"They have learned two things," he says; "that they must hurry and that they must endure. They have two climates—the freezing cold of the star-lit nights and the alternating heat of the midday summer sun. In such an environment a flora thrives that is unsurpassed in numbers of species, in beauty of form, color and sweetness of perfume."

Capone Arrives At Miami Home

Racketeer Chief Unmolested on His Train Journey Through Florida.

Miami, Fla., April 20 (A.P.).—"Scarface" Al Capone, Chicago racketeer and gang leader, arrived here today from the windy city to spend two weeks at his palatial home on Palm Island. He was accompanied by his 13-year-old nephew and a Chicago alderman. Capone made the trip by train. His journey through Florida was without interruption from authorities who several weeks ago were ordered by Gov. Carlton to arrest Capone and escort him to the State line, should he attempt to enter Florida.

A Federal injunction granted by United States Judge Halsted L. Ritter restrains sheriffs of 20 counties in the State from molesting Capone during his visit. Capone talked freely.

"I have no interest in politics, neither in Chicago nor Miami." He said, "and I ha'm here for a rest which I think I deserve. All that I want is a fair break. I have done nothing in violation of the law in Miami and will not. All I wish is to be left alone and enjoy the home which I have purchased here."

W.C.T.U. SAYS WETS FAIL TO MAKE CASE

"Continued Old Bludgeoning Tactics" of Brewers, Union Asserts.

STATEMENT IS ISSUED

(Associated Press.)

Failure of the wets "at every point in their testimony" was the judgment yesterday of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in a statement reviewing the recent prohibition hearings before the House judiciary committee.

"The wets," the statement said, "failed ignominiously in their attempt to show the women of America desiring a return to the domination of the legalized booze traffic. They continued the old bludgeoning tactics of the United States Brewers' Association, presenting noisy testimony, but little evidence."

On the other hand, it continued, "having fought the liquor interests for 50 years and knowing they have learned no new tricks, the drys concentrated almost entirely on Nation-wide evidence from unprejudiced sources showing that the health, wealth and happiness of America had been enhanced greatly by closing the saloons and outlawing the liquor traffic."

Comparing presentation of wet and dry testimony on various phases of the prohibition question, the statement concluded that "as a practical matter the economic side of the argument so forcibly put to the congressional investigaters was the strongest national argument for prohibition; while the most potent political force was the enormous number of women shown to be favorable to prohibition."

Scholar Attacks Pension System

Carnegie Foundation Head Hits "Forced Tribute" to Veterans.

New York, April 20 (A.P.).—Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, in a bulletin on "The Social Philosophy of Pensions," issued today, charged Congress with weakness in meeting the efforts of veterans' associations "to force tribute" from the Government in the form of pensions.

"Any pension system under which the beneficiary is provided with an old age annuity without cost or participation by himself," said Dr. Pritchett, "is, in the long run, demoralizing to any group of men, however high minded." The bulletin also criticized the pension systems of several Protestant churches for their "faulty social conceptions." Among such systems, only that of the Congregational church was credited with "a sound contractual system of annuities."

This statement, however, today brought a strong denial from Bishop Emeritus William Lawrence, president of the Protestant Episcopal Church Pension Fund.

Prince of Wales Quits Cairo for Return Home

Cairo, Egypt, April 20 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales, on his way home after an extended hunting trip in Africa, left Cairo today aboard a special train for Port Said, where he is boarding the liner Rawal-Pindi tonight for Marseilles, France.

A crowd of prominent government officials and members of the British colony gathered to see him off. The train steamed out of the station to reechoing strains of "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow." The Prince began his African expidition, during which he traveled the length of the continent, at Capetown in January.

Thugs Get $4,000 In Taxi Garage

Cashier, Who Thought It Joke, Disillusioned by Shot From Pistol.

Chicago, April 20 (A.P.).—A robber's bullet singed Matthew Kurtz's mustache and his sense of humor simultaneously early today as six men, armed with shotguns and pistol, held up 30 men in a West Side taxi garage and escaped with $4,000 in cash. Kurtz, counting receipts in his cashier's cage, suddenly saw a pistol slipped under the edge of the window.

"Put that gun away and turn in your books before you get fired!" Kurtz ordered. He thought it was one of the drivers, joking.

But Kurt became instantly serious when a bullet singed into the wall behind his head. He raised his hands as another gunman stepped in and scooped up the week-end receipts while four others forced drivers and mechanics to lie in a heap in a corner.

Still threatening their victims with guns, the sextet backed out and fled in a waiting car. Kurtz fired a futile shot after them.

FIRE SWEEPS HOUSE; FIVE OF FAMILY DIE

Father and Children Burn to Death When Trapped While Sleeping.

MOTHER AND SON HURT

New York, April 20 (A.P.).—Fire that crept upon them while they slept early today took the lives of a father and four of his children. The mother and a son received serious burns and injuries.

The dead, whose charred bodies were found by firemen in the ruins of their home in Brooklyn, are Christopher Johnson, 62, and his children, Clara, 18; Gladys, 16; Harold, 14, and Elwood, 9. The mother, Mary, 52, and Christopher, jr., 21, saved their lives by jumping from the windows of their bedrooms after they found the flames rendered futile any attempts at rescue.

From his cot in Norwegian Hospital, Christopher recounted his story of the discovery of the flames, his unavailing efforts to save his family and his own escape.

The Johnsons lived in a six-room apartment on the second floor of a brick building. Christopher and his mother occupied bedrooms at the front and rear of the house, respectively, while the rest of the family was asleep in the inner rooms.

Christopher was awakened by the cries of his sisters. Opening the door of his room, he found the hallway ablaze. Repeated attempts to rush through the wall of fire to their room brought only severe burns to the youth. Finally, when the flames threatened to cut off his own escape through the window, he jumped.

Meanwhile, his mother was awakened by his cries. She jumped from her window to the yard below, receiving a fracture of the skull. At a hospital physicians said her condition was critical.

When firemen arrived, they found the entire upper part of the house a mass of flames and were prevented for some time from entering the building. No indication of the origin of the fire was found.

Old Convict Ship Arrives in Capital

Historic Vessel to Be Open to Public at Seventh Street Wharf.

Reaching Washington yesterday, the old British convict ship Success, which left winter quarters at Richmond Friday, docked at the Seventh street wharf. Although the vessel, which is 140 years old, was capable of making the trip under her own sail, Capt. D. H. Smith, her skipper, decided to tow the old prison ship up from Virginia, utilizing a pair of tugs for the purpose. Crews of workmen immediately went to work, providing runways and gangplanks for the convenience of the public, to which the ship will be open at 6 o'clock tonight.

The Success is a veritable museum of "man's inhumanity to man." Built for the East India merchant trade, the old ship was later made the flagship of the infamous convict ship fleet, conveying thousands of men, women and children to penal servitude. Later she was utilized as a prison ship. Original whipping racks, lead-tipped whips, leg irons and various forms of manacles, the "coffin bath," "the "tiger's den" and other authentic instruments of torture bear grim witness to the methods by which the British convicts were kept under control.

The ship will be open daily from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m.

Rite to Be Said For Mrs. Ballou

Will Be Buried Beside Her Husband in Arlington Cemetery.

A commitment service for Mrs. Sidney Ballou, widow of Judge Sidney A. Ballou, who died suddenly in Memphis, Tenn., Thursday, of heart disease, will be said in the Fort Lincoln Cemetery Chapel today at 2:30 p. m. by the Rev. Dr. Robert Johnston, rector of St. John's Church, Lafayette Square.

Mrs. Ballou will be buried beside her husband in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Ballou is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Evan Thomas Fisher, of New York, and Mrs. Richard Lloyd Page, of San Francisco, and a sister, Mrs. Harry Turner, of this city.

During the World War Mrs. Ballou was prominent in Red Cross work and served on the committee of the National Service Schools. For a number of years Judge and Mrs. Ballou lived in Washington and were well known in social circles here. Mrs. Ballou recently had lived in New York.

Many Easter Visitors See Post's Model Home

The Washington Post model home at 4313 Elm street proved one of the major Easter attractions of the National Capital. The home, in the Leland section of Chevy Chase, built by M. and R. B. Warren, was a place of interest for many who admired its exquisite construction and arrangement and its tasteful furnishings with genuine antiques by Mrs. J. J. Dimon.

The home is reached by driving out Wisconsin avenue to Leland street, just beyond the Chevy Chase Club, then turning right and proceeding three blocks to Forty-fourth street, then left two blocks to the property. It will be open for inspection daily from 1 o'clock in the afternoon to 9 o'clock in the evening.

Rome Will Celebrate Its 2,683d Birthday

Rome, April 20 (A.P.).—The most picturesque ceremony scheduled for the 2,683d birthday of Rome tomorrow will be the solemn placing of laurel wreath on the altar to Julius Caesar on the Roman Forum. A delegation of Italian World War volunteers will thus pay homage to the founder of the Roman empire.

Fascist authorities propose to make this tribute an annual ceremony.

Japanese Navy Officer Drowned in Maneuvers

Tokyo, April 20 (A.P.).—Rengo News Agency dispatches from the Sasebo naval base today said that Lieut. Commander Karoku, commanding the Japanese submarine RO-61, was drowned during fleet maneuvers in Formosa strait.

Karoku fell from the submarine's deck while the vessel was running on the surface. During the same maneuvers a naval plane fell into the sea and the crew of three is missing.

DR. A. J. CARRICO, 58, DIES IN BALTIMORE

Funeral Services Will Be Held at Late Home Here Tomorrow.

NATIVE OF MARYLAND

Dr. Albert Joseph Carrico, 58 years old, one of the best known physicians in this section of the country, died suddenly late Saturday night in Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore.

Funeral services will be conducted at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning from his late home at 3311 Sixteenth street northwest, followed by a requiem mass a half hour later at the Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, with the right Rev. Msgr. P. C Gavan officiating.

The son of Thomas A. and Anne Dent Carrico, he was born October 18, 1871, at the lod family homestead in Charles County, Maryland. Following in the steps of his father, his grandfather and three uncles, he chose the profession of medicine and received his education at both St. Charles College in Ellicott City and the University of Maryland, graduating from the latter institution in 1896.

Although admitted to practice here in early 1897, he served at the beginning of his career as resident physician at St. Joseph's Hospital in Providence, R. I., before returning here to practice for 33 years. He earned wide recognition of a general practitioner and a skilled diagnostician. He also was an ardent sportsman.

He was a fellow of the American Medical Association, an active member of the District Medical Society, a member of the staff of Georgetown Hospital, a member of the Washington Chapter, Knights of Columbus, and the Congressional Club.

In 1903 he was married to Miss Harriet Thyson, member of an old Washington family, who with a daughter, Mrs. Anne Carrico Bacon, survive him.

The active pallbearers will be Dr. W. Calhoun Sterling, Dr. L. B. Norris, Dr. Robert A. Kelly, Dr. Murray Russell, Dr. James W. Kesler, Dr. R. J. Kemp, Dr. William J. Stanton and Dr. Francis S. Machen. The honorary pallbearers will be Dr. Lewellyn F. Barker, of Baltimore; Dr. Reginald R. Walker, Dr. J. Thomas Kelly, jr., B. Frank Saul, Dr. Edwin B. Behrend, Dr. Charles K. Koones, Henry Sohon, Henry Stringer, Dr. H. J. Crosson and James H. Johnson, jr.

MEXICAN KIDNAPING RELATED BY CASSIDY

and told us ten soldiers were approaching his house. My captors told him to tell them we had passed in the opposite direction, and we immediately hit the train again."

After being lost in a jungle that was almost impenetrable, the party reached a narrow trail.

"We heard voices, and my captors shoved me into the bush again. With a gun at my head I saw ten soldiers pass along the trail looking for me. I could have reached out and touched them, but the gun was at my head."

After dodging soldiers all through the day, Mr. Cassidy and his kidnapers arrived at San Bartolo.

"One of my captors went in to get some of his friends and returned an hour later with water. The kidnapers, now five in number, took me into the hills and spent the night.

"At 5 a. m. Thursday morning I again began to argue with the men urging them to release me, and after five hours of argument they let me go. I don't know what it was that moved them to release me, but I think it was the closeness of the pursuit, and their realization that they would have to scatter to escape.

"They gave me a gun and I started for San Bartolo, arriving there at 11 a. m., half dead from fear, hunger and exhaustion."

Mr. Cassidy was warm in praise of Gen. Gonzales and the Mexican soldiers that hunted for him. He said that one time there were 1,000 men, women and children, armed with guns, clubs and rocks, searching for him. Farmers and agrarians throughout the district had cooperated.

500 WILL TAKE PART IN CHILDREN'S EVENT

Work Done in Various Arts During Last Year to Be Shown at Fete.

SPONSORS ARE NAMED

Five hundred or more children from the various neighborhoods and community centers throughout the city will appear in the annual Children's Festival, under the direction of the Community Center Department, at Central High Community Center, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest, May 8. The festival is in reality a demonstration of the work that has been done during the past winter in the arts of music, drama, dance, handcraft and aircraft, by the youth of the city in their leisure time under the supervision of experienced teachers.

For the last four years the event has been growing in importance in the minds of those who are interested in the proper development of the leisure time of boys and girls in the cities; and a group of leaders has become sponsors for this year's festival. To date, the sponsors include Representative Katherine Langley, Miss Grace Abbott, of the Children's Bureau; Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, of the Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, of the Board of Education; Mrs. Karl Fenning, president of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. Otto L. Veerhoff, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. William L. Corbin, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. J. Garfield Riley, Mrs. Paul John Kvale, Mrs. Frank W. Ballou, Mrs. E. C. Graham, and Mrs. Procter L. Dougherty.

The wives of the three District Commissioners are likewise sponsors for the event, Mrs. Luther Reichelderfer, Mrs. Herbert B. Crosby, and Mrs. William B. Ladue.

These neighborhood committees are as follows: Chevy Chase Center, Mrs. W. C. Blakeslee, Mrs. Henry C. Fuller, Mrs. Katharine L. Smith, Mrs. J. E. Cecil, Mrs. H. J. Farner, Mrs. Caleb Powers; Henry D. Cook Center, Mrs. Henry D. Aller, Mrs. Norman B. Haley, Mrs. Helen Young Vetter, Mrs. Paul C. Yates; East Washington Center, Mrs. Ella Scott, Mrs. M. Chase, Mrs. S. BENGAL DISQUIETED BY REBELS' FORAY

Police and Soldiers Combing Hills in Search of Raiding Band.

LAWYERS TO AID GANDHI

Calcutta, India, April 20 (A.P.).—The situation in Bengal, as the aftermath of an Indian riot at Chittagong on Friday night, appeared confused and disturbed today, with reports from many districts indicating a state of tension that may lead to serious developments.

Full details about the Chittagong raid are still lacking. It appears to have been the work of a revolutionary organization not directly connected with the civil disobedience movement of Mahatma Gandhi, who has repeatedly urged his followers to avoid violence in their opposition to the government.

Some 60 revolutionaries are believed to have taken part in the riot and raid. The neighboring hills are being thoroughly combed by police and soldiers on their trail.

About 1,000 rifles, 20 revolvers and 55 muskets are reported missing from the Chittagong police armory, raided by rioters. Five arrests have been made. The district magistrate issued a statement today saying that all had been quiet during the night.

At Patna the district magistrate issued notices saying that if the present unrest continues additional police would be hired at the expense of the inhabitants. Arrests of minor leaders in the civil disobedience movement occurred at scattered points in Bengal.

Meanwhile the all-Bengal lawyers' conference adopted a resolution urging lawyers to help Gandhi's movement by all possible means, and to be ready to suspend practice when called upon to do so by the all-India congress committee.

Three in Leipsig Die in Red Riot

Two Policemen and Communist Killed, Ten Hurt as Shots Fly.

Leipsig, Germany, April 20 (A.P.).—Three persons were killed and about ten injured in a clash between Communist demonstrators and police this afternoon on the Augustus Platz, in the center of the city. A police captain was among the dead.

About 30,000 Communists gathered on the Augustus Platz, a spacious square, for a convention of Communist youth, and the fighting broke out when the police began to put a cordon about the side streets. The police captain was killed outright and another policeman died from wounds, after an exchange of shots. One Communist was killed.

The police later succeeded in restoring order.

APPROPRIATE FUNERAL DESIGNS

Brickbats & Bouquets

By JAMES HAY, JR.

NOW, if Mr. Curtis, patriotically forgetting for the moment Mr. Caraway's Democratic loyalties, had appointed the Arkansan instead of Mr. Nye as chairman of the Senate campaign expenditures committee, there would be no talk about the probe of primary cash investments amounting to nothing.

The gentleman from Arkansas is the prime, puissant and pile-driving investigator of all time. Observe his tactics and triumphs as chief inquisitor of the Senate lobby committee.

* * * *

PERFECT and polished prober! Combining the finesse of Machiavelli and Richelieu with the wisdom of Solomon, Solon and Rhadamanthus! Craftily mingling the deductive genius of Sherlock Holmes with the dashing gallantry of Nick Carter!

His effectiveness comes chiefly from the unlimited variety of his moods and methods. One moment calm as a sleeping maiden whose lips are molded to a smile by the touch of dreamland's lovely play of fancy, he becomes in the next second the original blue-nosed, ring-tailed, side-leaping, fire-flinging cougar of the question mark.

He seduces 'em with his Southern drawl and ruins 'em with his satanic roar. He charms 'em into a false security with an impeccable courtesy, only to bewilder 'em with a fusillade of roof-rattling accusations, innuendoes and implications.

FELINE, mysterious and imperturbable, he creeps up on 'em in the dark, or, blunt, forceful and ferocious, he lets 'em see in advance how terrible their impending demolition is to be. He irks 'em with irony and socks 'em with sarcasm. He bemuses 'em with metaphors and punctures 'em with prosopopoeias.

He transforms the rules of evidence into seven-league boots in which he jumps with dazzling speed from the prosaic to the preposterous, from the elemental "Why?" to the unanswerable "How come?"—always with dark, devious and ultimately enlightening design.

When he takes a graceful header from the springboard of curiosity into the murky waters of hidden skullduggery, he goes straight to the slimy bottom and comes back to the surface with both hands full of facts plucked from the lowest depths of lobbying degradation.

* * * *

SEMIOCCASIONALLY, when facilely flashing into the troubled pool, he impales himself on a snag such as presented itself in the person of Mr. Henry H. Curran, the antiprohibition warrior, the man who "grew and grew" until he felt big enough to tell the Arkansan to go 'way back and sit down and calm himself.

But usually Mr. Caraway is the human wrench who unscrews the inscrutable. In escaping his inquisition, the 1930 senatorial candidates are so full of luck that, if they were lightning rods for disaster, they wouldn't attract enough electricity to illuminate a lightning bug.

POLICE PROMULGATE OPERA TRAFFIC RULE

Parking Near Theater to Be Banned After 6 o'clock on Two Nights.

Traffic regulations for the two night performances of the Metropolitan Opera Company at the Fox Theater, April 23 and 24, have been completed. Rules for the opening performance on Wednesday night, when the curtain will rise at 8 on "La Boheme," will be identical with regulations for Thursday night performance of "Andrea Chenier."

Parking in the vicinity of the Fox Theater will be banned after 6 p. m. F street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth, will be one way to those attending the operas, no left-hand turns being permitted anywhere within that block. This will make it necessary for machines to come into F street either from Fifteenth street or Fourteenth street, with every effort being made to have traffic come up from Pennsylvania avenue.

To expedite this, both sides of F street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth will be barred to all parking, with this ban continuing to Fifteenth street, but on the north side only between Fourteenth and Fifteenth.

Fourteenth street will have all parking banned on the east side of the street. Inspector Brown will supervise personally a detail of extra police to expedite the movement of traffic and to avoid any possibilities of tie-ups.

The Fox Theater management is employing extra doormen both for the taking of tickets and to assist patrons from their cars upon arrival at the theater. As to arrangements for the Friday afternoon performance of "La Traviata," plans are yet to be announced.

30,000 VIEW EASTER RITES OF MORAVIANS

Line Winds to "God's Acre" in Picturesque Service as Dawn Breaks.

NEW YORK HAS PARADE

Winston-Salem, N. C., April 20 (A.P.).—Through the branches of massive oaks on the eastern boundary of "God's Acre," where the Moravian dead lie sleeping, the first days of a saffron sun shone slantingly today on 30,000 persons, pilgrims to the resurrection ervice.

A venerable bihop, the Right Rev. Edward Rondthaler, bent but little by the weight of his 87 years, led the service, his fiftieth. For half a century he has been the chief figure in the religious spectacle the Moravians brought from Austria to their settlement in old Salem in 1766.

As the clock chimed the hour of 5 he came out on the little church stoop with its plain iron railing and looked at the crowd. "The Lord is risen," he announced in loud, clear tones and in response came the reverberation from the multitude, "The Lord is risen, indeed," and the band of almost 400 pieces broke into the stately German chorale, "Hail, All Hail, Victorious Lord and Savior."

The first half of the Easter morning litany ended, a solemn march to the cemetery started. The line slowly wound its way into the center walk of "God's Acre," the Moravian Cemetery. As the bishop took his solitary seat on a tiny platform, the first rosy blush in the East heralded the dawn.

New York, April 20 (A.P.).—With the rising of the sun New York began its celebration of Easter today—a celebration of chants and pageants that stretched from the dingy pavements of the Bowery to the candle-lighted altars of Fifth avenue cathedrals, fragrant with incense and the perfume of a thousand lilies.

The first of the Easter observances began with a mass at 2:30 at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Church, and with the sunrise scores of chimes and choirs throughout the city joined in the age-old chant:

"Christ is risen! Hallelujah!"

Thousands of New Yorkers rose to attend out-of-door services on the grounds of Columbia University, New York University and in Washington Square.

With the close of the morning services the throngs poured onto Fifth avenue for the Easter parade. And here the Bowery's threadbare garments mingled with Park avenue's new spring fashions as Urbain Leboux, known as "Mr. Zero," led about 75 of his hobo followers past St. Patrick's Cathedral at the parade's height.

revealed that 10,106 men, women and children entered the Bethlehem Chapel. Virtually every section of the country was represented by the visitors.

Special Service Held.

For the shut-ins who were unable to attend church or see the Easter throng, the radio chains brought descriptive accounts and sermons. These, incidentally, were carried to many parts of the Nation over the networks.

Evening services were for the most part featured by religious tableaux, musical programs, or illustrated sermons. A special service was held at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Sylvan Theater at the Monument Grounds under the direction of the Chief Executive's pastor, Dr. Murray.

Among the things that attracted the attention of motorists during the day was the British convict ship Success, which is on exhibition at the Seventh Street Wharf.

Today will be bigger than Easter Sunday for thousands of children in Washington, as the annual egg rolling party will be staged on the White House lawn. The Zoo Park grounds will be used to accommodate the overflow. The weather, which will be warm and cloudy, will probably bring nearly 50,000 boys and girls to engage in the hunt for colored eggs.

cent, incinerators 60 per cent, bridges 47 per cent and public buildings 33 per cent.

The largest decrease reported by Secretary Lamont was 55 per cent in contracts for railway buildings, followed by 28 per cent in park buildings, 14 per cent in sewerage systems and 3 per cent in educational buildings.

In the field of strictly private construction, the three major types were below the corresponding period of last year, with residential construction lagging far behind. Contracts awarded for commercial buildings were 15 per cent under the first quarter of last year, those for industrial buildings 17 per cent off and residential construction 48 per cent off.

LETTER BARES REIGN OF BANDITS IN CHINA

Reds Say They Will Kill All Foreigners in Kanchow, Missionary Writes.

HUNDREDS DIE IN RAIDS

Shanghai, April 20 (A.P.).—A letter received here today from a missionary in the beseiged City of Kanchow, Kiangsi Province, said a situation of anarchy prevailed in the district under a bandit regime engaging in wholesale carnage and plunder.

The letter said Reds who have besieged the city for weeks consider foreigners within the walls responsible for the strong resistance of Chinese soldiery. The bandits were quoted as promising to execute every foreigner in Kanchow "as soon as the city is captured."

While machine gunners and riflemen on the city's walls kept up a stubborn resistance, the bandits were described as dividing their time between the siege of the city and plunder of the countryside.

Women Held Hostages.

The wealthy classes especially were said to have suffered from the bandits' hatred. In one village 35 land owners were shot as a warning to others to surrender their property without resistance.

Villages have been looted and many hostages, including numerous young women kidnaped. Many of the latter were described as contemplating suicide when opportunity offered.

Foreign mission stations in south Kiangsi were attacked and the lands confiscated. Title deeds were destroyed after the missionaries fled and the captors organized communal governments, the missionary's letter said.

An acute food shortage was predicted because the fields were not planted.

Bandits Kill Hundreds.

"It is only a matter of time until the entire south Kiangsi passes from government control," the letter concluded. "The future is indeed black."

Advices from Chekiang province said upwards of 20,000 bandits had overrun the Chekiang-Anhwei provincial borders, killing hundreds and exacting thousands of dollars from the people. Canton despatches said Kwangtung bandits had become so emboldened they were moving about as military units, capturing constantly increasing areas, establishing their own governments and levying their own taxes.

Virtually the entire province of Kiangsi, north of the Yangte river, continues bandit-scourged, despite sporadic opposition of the government. The Italian minister to China now in Canton, demanded that the Kwangtung authorities pay 100,000 Mexican dollars indemnity for the recent slaying by bandits of two Italian missionaries in north Kwangtung.

Provincial officials replied the Nationalist government at Nanking was responsible for indemnities.

passed around that the two had been told to move out of the district.

Del Re's widow told police a stranger called at the house in midweek and that high words had been exchanged. Since then, she said, Del Re had been fearful. Although the woman professed inability to describe the stranger, orders were issued to arrest Genero.

Saw Car Speed Away.

Joseph Canino, who lives above the saloon, told detectives he was awakened at 4 o'clock by the rattle of pistol fire and rushed to a front window to see a car speed away.

Police found the body of Wakefield, a bullet through his head, lying behind the bar in a litter of small coins. A neatly arranged sheath of paper money, totaling $65, rested untouched on the open cash register above him.

Special's body, punctured by slugs through the breast, was sprawled near the entrance to the back room. The body of Del Re was crumpled near the front door, where he apparently met death while attempting to flee from his assassin. He was shot through the neck.

Detectives, in reconstructing the slaying, said the killer had left companions in the automobile at the curb and entered the cafe alone. As Wakefield, counting the day's receipts behind the bar, turned, he was dropped by a bullet through the head, the coins dropping to the floor.

TOKYO OFFICIALLY APPROVES SEA PACT

Formal Instructions to Sign London Naval Treaty Sent Delegates.

TO ANSWER OPPOSITION

Tokyo, April 20 (A.P.).—Formal instructions to sign the London naval pact on behalf of Japan were sent today to Reijiro Wakatsuki, head of the Japanese delegation in London.

After the text had been carefully examined by Premier Hamaguchi and Foreign Minister Shidehara and other high officials, it was decided there was no need to revise the document.

Before approving the treaty draft Premier Hamaguchi and the foreign minister conferred with other high officials for four hours. After the conference the premier issued a statement for the press.

"We carefully discussed the text of the treaty and found no necessity of revision," the premier said to the Rengo News Agency. "The foreign office will immediately cable M. Wakatsuki instructions to sign. Upon receipt of M. Wakatsuki's report that the treaty is signed I shall make a further statement regarding the London conference."

Observers believe the premier's promised statement on the conference would be designed as a reply to attacks on the government's course which the political opposition, including the big navy group and other conservatives are expected to launch next week, when parliamentary session opens.

Foreign Minister Shidehara also is expected to make a statement either directly to the press or early in the parliamentary session which begins tomorrow.

Officials believe that criticism of the treaty almost certainly will be clamorous, but the Associated Press was assured today by the highest authority that the government is confident that opponents of the London agreement will not be able to prevent ratification. Many leaders in the privy council, whose approval must precede the emperor's ratification, have spoken disapprovingly of the government's "surrender," but the cabinet is confident the councilors will be unwilling to take the reponsibility for wrecking the pact. This belief was strengthened by the fact that the international instrument will mean a great financial savings for Japan and gain the good will of the Anglo-Saxon powers.

Two Farmers Die As Feud Climax

Foes Fight Fatal Battle With Shotgun and Pistol.

Floral City, Fla., April 20 (A.P.).—Harvey King, 45, and E. S. Morris, 62, neighboring farmers, living about 3 miles north of here, shot each other to death today in an Easter morning pistol-shotgun battle as the climax to a long feud.

The gun fight followed an argument this morning over Morris' hunting on Sunday near King's home and over unfenced lands, owned by the latter.

The fight was witnessed by King's wife and Morris' two young sons. King used an automatic pistol and Morris a shotgun loaded with buckshot. King was killed instantly. Morris died several minutes later.

PREAMBLE IS CHARGED

the submarine humanization convention already adopted by all five powers and published. With rectification of this omission, the New York World News Service has now presented the essentials of the whole treaty as the contents of each article have been discussed at length as they have arisen, and no further changes are likely beyond verbal clarification unless something new develops at the meeting of the delegation tomorrow.

Franco-Italian Problem.

The cloud of Franco-Italian relations continues to hang over the three-power results achieved here. The Italians throughout the conference have been most vague about what they actually intend to build while maintaining their claim to parity with France. It has been generally assumed that they were incapable of rivaling France in building ratio.

The New York World News Service has high authority for the statement that, in fact, Italy from now onward, intends to build ton for ton, ship for ship, against France, and that she believes her five dockyards and her resources permit her to make the challenge and to meet any French reply to it. The danger of this, of course, for the three-power agreement is that if France increases her program to keep ahead of Italy in modern ships, the British Rapidan and treaty figures will certainly have to be hoisted. It is more clear tonight than before that an understanding between France and Italy which would avert the threatened naval race, which is now, indeed, in full blast, is essential if the three-power figures are not to be lost.

Fate of Compromise in Doubt.

The fate of the compromise reached here between the global tonnage and category methods of limitation appears more than doubtful tonight. At first intended as part of the five-power treaty, this was rendered impossible by Italian refusal to agree to it. The reason for this was that Italy believed the method of limitation adopted, if sent to the Geneva disarmament conference with the blessing of this conference, would tend to work in favor of France and against Italy in any future disarmament negotiations.

When it became impossible to incorporate the formula in the treaty negotiated here, the jurists and others tried to work out a declaration or resolution by which the results reached, to which Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France attaches the greatest importance as settling a controversy of years' standing at Geneva, might still be forwarded to the preparatory disarmament commission.

It was thought until last night that this could be done even if Italy formulated a reservation, but the New York World News Service now learns that the committees of jurists and experts have been checked in this effort. By whom is not stated, but circumstantial evidence points to Italy.

Republicans and Police Clash in Irish Riots

Belfast, Northern Ireland, April 20 (A.P.).—A demonstration in commemoration of the Easter week uprising of 1915 brought about a clash between police and Irish Republicans today at Milltown Cemetery, near Belfast. The police charged a crowd with their batons and arrested four men alleged to be republican leaders.

Milltown Cemetery was one of half a dozen Ulster cemeteries held by a large police force in order to prevent Easter week demonstrations. At all other cemeteries the day passed quietly.

ROBINSON TELLS LONDON NAVAL PARLEY'S RESULTS

any security pact. The American delegation made it plain that the United States would not join any consultative pact which could by implication be regarded as giving security."

Senator Robinson described the safeguarding clause in the treaty as providing: "That if any one of the three (the United States, Great Britain or Japan) feels its national security jeopardized by new naval construction of any power whose auxiliary fleet has not been limited, it may notify the others what increase it requires. The others may then make proportionate increases."

Pointing out that this clause could be criticized as permitting "disturbance of the figures agreed to," the speaker said the relations of the fleets and the principles of limitation would still be maintained.

"It should also be remembered," he said, "that the limitation of armaments must proceed only through the voluntary action of nations and that no power can arbitrarily impose on another restrictions of the means of defense without assuming more responsibility for its safety.

"It is of first importance that the limitation of armaments shall be regarded as increasing rather than diminishing the safety of peoples."

In conclusion, Senator Robinson said: "Our war tonnage is now becoming obsolescent and we are faced with the necessity of rebuilding much of the Navy. The treaty enables us to proceed with the task in an orderly manner and at a lower total tonnage than we have had in the past, in spite of the fact that we have built less than any other country represented at the conference."

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

ONE theory advanced for Senator Clarence Dill charging Owen D. Young with endeavoring to form a world-wide radio trust, and hooking it up with the world bank, and his severe arraignment of the project, is that the senator, himself reported to be a Democratic presidential candidate, is thus trying to eliminate Mr. Young, an outstanding Democratic possibility, from the forthcoming race.

Amos and Andy have invented a trick letterhead as well as trick pockets. It reads as follows:

Freeman F. Gosden Chas. J. Correll
Amos and Andy.

The joker is that there is no city or street address to which a reply may be addressed. Anything sent to station WMAQ will reach them, but they have a "hideaway" office, the address of which is known only to a few close friends.

When the summer schedule goes into effect next week, based on daylight time in New York, "Amos 'n' Andy" will be heard in Washington at 6 o'clock instead of at 7 as now, thus no doubt disrupting quite a few dinner hours.

The Solemn Pontifical Vesper Service at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Brookland, scheduled for broadcast over the Columbia System next Sunday, has been canceled because of the change of daylight time on that day.

BEGINNING about the first week in June the regular Sunday afternoon broadcasts from the Washington Cathedral will be discontinued. In their stead the Protestant Hour from New York sponsored by the National Broadcasting Company will be brought to the Capital.

As explained by officials of the NBC this will complete the cycle here of the Jewish and Catholic hours now being offered by the company. The speakers for the Protestant Hour are selected by the National Federation of Churches and among them are Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

The Washington Cathedral was one of the first churches in the United States to go on the air; Bishop Freeman's sermons having been broadcast for the last seven years. No charge has been made for the broadcasting, but during that time about $18,000 has been paid out by the Cathedral for wire charges, it was said.

When the 100-piece United Service Orchestra, to which, in addition to the Army and Navy Bands, musicians of the Marine Band will be added, strikes up at the Pan-American Union tonight (station NAA, 9 p. m.; WRC, 10:30 p. m.), the dream of many years of Franklin P. Adams to have these concerts really heard by our neighbors to the South may be realized.

An elaborate relay will be made by short wave stations at Schenectady. Stations in the Latin-American countries will endeavor to pick up the concert and rebroadcast it locally. Among these will be the new station HRB which has just been established in Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

"DURING the hour Floyd Gibbons recounts one of his war-time experiences," an NBC press release read referring to the war correspondent's talk at 9 o'clock last Saturday night. "In the middle of the night of February 25, 1917, the steamship Laconia, on which he was traveling to Europe, was torpedoed by a German submarine. Gibbons miraculously escaped and before submitting himself to a physician's treatment cabled a 2,000-word story to his newspaper."

This interested us and, after waiting around for the hour to arrive, we tuned in to hear Floyd give the details. Instead he gave one of those advertising talks which we so carefully try to avoid and said nary a word regarding the Laconia incident.

Thus are listeners stung on advance program announcements.

A daily resume of major league baseball results compiled by the Associated Press will be given over WJZ's network (not including WRC) throughout the baseball season.

On Sundays, the resume begins at 6:55 o'clock; on Mondays at 7:30 o'clock, and Tuesdays, until April 29, at 6:10 o'clock. On and after that date they will be read at 7:15 p. m. on Tuesdays.

Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays the scores will be given at 7:30 o'clock; on Saturdays at 6:40 p. m.

There is still uncertainty as to whether any station will broadcast the local baseball games.

HEARD last in the Puccini opera series, Saturday night, Mme. Frances Alda, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has entered into a contract for a series of six summer appearances during the RCA-Victor Hour at the salary of $18,000.

Boys will supplant the entire staff of Station WPEN, Philadelphia, as a part of the program of Boy Week May 3-10. They will be in charge for one hour and will present an original program.

The life story of Rin-Tin-Tin will be put on the air as a radio dog serial sponsored by a Midwest dog kennel concern. Rin-Tin-Tin will not appear in the broadcast but his bark will be imitated mechanically.

PATTER from WTMJ, Milwaukee: "Tilly, you were entertaining a man in the kitchen last night, were you not?"

"That's for him to say, ma'am. I did my best."

Dare Interprets the MODE

One of those "there-really-should-be-one-in-every-wardrobe" dresses . . . black georgette with self pleating and white touches. (Courtesy of Philippe et Gaston, Paris.)

Paris, April 20.

HAVE you noticed what has become of the corsage boutonniere of yester-season? Withered and blown away? Not entirely. It a rose by another name now!

Most modernistic of all the boutonnieres are the glass flowers that must be so carefully tended or they live but a day. But they lend such a fragile, delicate touch to a summer dress, buried in a swirl of chiffon with only their pretty flower faces peeping out.

The leather collar of a tweed coat sometimes likes to have a leather posy to keep it company. Or a woolen dress won't always say "No" to a small felt flower—not and really mean it, the way evening dresses mean it—to a shoulder corsage. They simply won't have it. If a corsage goes out of an evening, it must be carried in the hand and held for a time about the waist, or now at the bosom, or nestled against milady's hair as she leans upon an arm for a moment.

And what do you think? You can, if you want to, hie yourself to the jeweler's shop and buy your boutonniere—a modernistic pin worn on the lapel of a tailleur. Now there's an idea!

• • • •

Simple, practical, chic, this Philippe et Gaston dress of black crepe georgette with pleats of the georgette for trimming, and a white georgette collar and cuff.

Why long for them? Why not make some that are even lovelier and cost you only the price of three yards of chiffon? In other words, why not send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet that tells you how to make soft, flowing ones in the Grecian manner, enhancing your own loveliness?

What am I talking about? Oh, heavens, I meant to tell you—nightgowns, of course!

• • • •

Aren't we a little tired of the inevitable white touch on black? I for one could do with a few collars and cuffs, vestees and incrustations of Patou pink on black, or pale yellow or peach.

This is a tip, too, for the women who may have a skin that is not flattered by a touch of white close to the face. And even the woman who is flattered by it will find the peach and rose even more flattering.

• • • •

Joseph Paquin shows a smart blouse buttoned with glass buttons, and then just to show that the blouse really belongs to the family, as it were, these glass buttons continue right on down the skirt.

• • • •

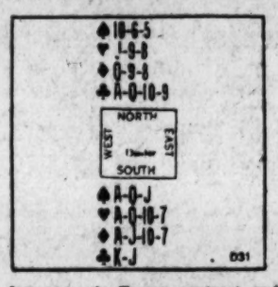
Now there's another thing—the weekly Dare fashion letter appears regularly in The Sunday Washington Post.

Au Revoir!

WORK ON BRIDGE

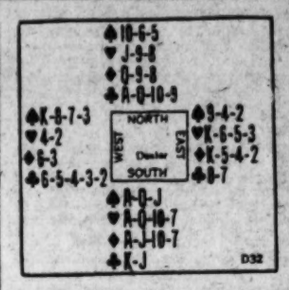
MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.

I recently saw a hand butchered by a Bridge player who rated himself much above the average. To avoid the suggestions which showing the adverse cards might convey, I give first only the cards of the Declarer's two hands:



It was a No Trump contract and South was the Declarer. The first lead was the Trey of Clubs. South passed the trick up to his Jack and then, to put Dummy in, led his King of Clubs, overtaking with dummy's Ace. He next led the Eight of Hearts from dummy and played the Queen from closed hand. When the finesse won he led the Ace of Hearts, and to trick 5 a Heart which East won. East led a Spade, South finessed, West won and led another Spade. After that the Declarer, being unable to lead Diamonds from dummy, lost a trick to the King, which was held by East; so the adversaries took three tricks.

I suggest that the reader determine how the hand should have been played before he looks at the distribution of the cards and the correct play given below.



Having all the winning Clubs, Declarer should have won the first trick in dummy, playing South's King or Jack under North's Ace or Queen. Then he should have led dummy's Jack of Hearts and played South's Ten if East did not cover (which he should not do with four Hearts). After that the Nine of Hearts led from dummy and the Seven played from closed hand if East ducked again. When that won, another finesse would capture the remaining Hearts, but that should be postponed and to trick 4 the Queen of Diamonds should be led from dummy and the Jack played from closed hand if the King did not cover. This would permit another finesse of Diamonds with the lead still retained in dummy, and then a third Diamond finesse won in the closed hand which would ensure four tricks in that suit.

After that, dummy could be put in with a Club and the remainder of dummy's Clubs could be run, closed hand discarding the Queen and Jack of Spades. Then the final Heart finesse could be taken for a grand slam.

It will be noted that if East plays either red King earlier, Declarer's task would be simplified.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

PREPARING YOUR HERBACEOUS BORDER.

AFTER locating your herbaceous border, the next step is the preparation of the soil. "Nothing without labor" is an old garden motto which it is well to keep in mind at this time.

It is true that herbaceous plants will grow in any good loam for a certain length of time, but you must prepare the soil properly if you would have permanent results. You know you are not planning for this season but for the seasons to come. The camouflage of having a good surface soil, but a poor soil beneath may fool persons, but it will never fool plants.

Always prepare the soil thoroughly and deeply. As a rule, good soil extends down only about a foot, yet many perennial or herbaceous plants are deep-rooting. There will be less dissatisfaction with a border in midsummer during prolonged dry spells if the roots of the plants are in cool, moisture-laden soil. Therefore, dig your border to the depth of twenty inches and incorporate some well-rotted manure with the lowest stratum of soil.

A soil in good physical condition is well supplied with decayed manure and is fibrous. If the soil in your border is too heavy, a little sand will loosen it. Should it be too sandy add lime and it will become more compact.

Never attempt to plant when the garden is excessively wet, as it is apt to be following a heavy rain. Working the soil when the ground is in a state of puddle only tends to batter down the border, with the result that when dry it will become caked and may not become porous again during the entire season.

In choosing plants for your border, consider the blooming season of each variety, for with care you can have a showing of bloom from April until November.

Arrange the plants so that the height, color and time of blooming are carefully blended. Do not hesitate to ask questions when making a purchase; any grower will be glad to answer them.

Generally speaking, keep all tall plants in the back of the border, the low-growing or dwarf varieties in front and those of medium height tucked in between. Of course, there are exceptions to this. You must have a few taller-growing varieties interspersed with the smaller ones throughout the border, so as to produce a natural effect.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"TAURUS."

If April 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4:30 p. m., and from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 a. m. to 8 a. m., and from 6 p. m. to 7:30 p. m.

Astrological conditions on this date seem to favor the watery parts of the earth more than the land, and those who have interests at sea or are traveling thereon will be benefited. Those interested in psychic phenomena will find this a "red letter" day.

The child born on this April 21 will have a large bump of imagination and will not be very self-reliant. It must not be surrounded by an artificial atmosphere or shielded too carefully, or it will go out in the world believing in a number of bogeys that do not exist, while ignorant of many that do.

There are but a few who have peeped underneath your almost false exterior and seen or known the real "you." Although you need no pseudo-selves, you seem afraid to exhibit to the world anything which is too definitely marked by your own individuality. You try to accommodate your whole routine of life to others. You are always playing up to your audience. Fate knew what she was doing when she gave you your natural role to play; it is a dynamic part for which you alone are fitted. As a mimic, you are colorless.

You are a slave to convention and dare not do a number of things you naturally want to do for fear of being philistine or bourgeois. You are afraid to shock, or of being shocked. Your timidity is cheating you out of many of life's best pleasures and experiences. You suffer from attacks of the blues. They are probably not due to any exterior causes, but to defective assimilation. You should be careful of your diet and should take plenty of outdoor exercise. You are very ambitious, but you want quick results. If progress is slow, you become discouraged and are too ready to accept failure. Remember, there are few men who have acquired a fortune or fame without a hard struggle. Do not aim lower, but climb higher!

JELLEFF'S
F STREET

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

Sol Bloom, congressman from New York, believes that Washington is the greatest show town in the United States. He does not mean this in the strict theatric sense of the word. Rather, Washington is to Mr. Bloom the Mecca for all Americans. When they come here they see the greatest sights that can be placed before the tourist. This particular period of the year is living proof of what the New Yorker means. Naturally, with 200,000 visitors in town—if there are that many—the theaters will profit. So it's a good show town in either sense of the word.

• • • •

Only two legitimate theaters are open to share in all the Eastertide business—the National and Poli's, with Jimmy Lake's burlesque house on Ninth street hoping to catch the overflow. Incidentally, Mr. Lake reports a successful season. One of the best weeks in his house was when his own show played there and Jimmy stepped out on the boards in his old role, entertainer extraordinary. Before leaving the ranks of thespians Mr. Lake was one of the best known burlesque comedians in the business.

• • • •

When the curtain goes up at the National tonight Mr. Stephen Cochran's estimable National Theater Players will try their hand at one of the most popular plays ever taken out on the road by Otis Skinner—"The Honor of the Family," no less. This was his second production under Frohman management, a translation from the French of Emile Fabre's dramatization of Balzac's "La Raboui Meuse." It had been a sensation at the Odeon in Paris, where the great French actor, Firmin Gamier, played the dominant Napoleonic colonel, Philippe Bridau. Tonight Walter Gilbert will have a go at it, and as he has played the part before, Mr. Clifford Brooke, the director, hopes and expects great things.

Unless the United States Government has a change of heart and forestalls the demolition of Poli's Theater this July, Mr. George White and his Scandals will open their final engagement in that theater tonight—at 8:30 o'clock. This marks the tenth anniversary of Mr. White's first visit to Washington with his Scandals. He and they have alternated between the National and Poli's, and always the business has been good. Mr. White is a dependable showman, an exhoofer who knows how dances should be staged. He stages them as he likes to see 'em; also as the theatergoing public likes 'em. 'Twas he who launched the Black Bottom on a universal tour of the stage. Now he has one called Bottom Up, a title which suggests, by the bye, the old-time days of Washington and the gentle art of quaffing toasts.

• • • •

This being Easter Monday night, both playhouses will undoubtedly be packed to the rafters. It is time that all the good folk, who kept Lent religiously, had a little relaxation—and here it is in two huge doses, at the National and at Poli's.

Shakespeare Society Will Hear John J. Daly

John J. Daly, dramatic critic of The Washington Post, will address the Shakespeare Society of Washington tonight at its birthday celebration at the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Arrangements have been made with WRC to broadcast the balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet at 5:30 p. m. Maurice Jarvis and Kate Tomlinson will enact the two name parts and Magdelene Musgiller will play the part of Juliet's nurse.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

Indoor Sun Baths at Open Window.
(Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.)

A sun bath can be given indoors at a window opened at top or bottom, the baby being placed in the patch of sunlight coming through the open space. If the room is heated the baby need not be wrapped up warmly. It may not be possible to expose the whole body to the sun; but the face, hands, legs can be exposed daily for increasing periods. The periods of exposure should be longer than the summer outdoor periods, and they should be between 10 a. m. and 1 p. m., when the rays are most intense.

Winter and fall babies need long sun baths as they are more likely to develop severe rickets than those born in the spring or summer. If the baby is used to indoor sun baths he can be started out of doors by the first of March, or even earlier, depending on the climate and the weather.

CHAPTER XXX.

"That's My Weakness Now."

I suppose my classmates at Yale often wondered why, on the few nights that I did not play, I did not loll on the campus, gossip on the fence, or go down to the theater with a crowd of them. They could not put themselves in my place. If they had, they would have understood why, on the nights when I was not out playing my saxophone to earn the wherewithal to remain in college, I would go to Hartford, New York, or even further, for the company of some girl. Consider that all day in the classrooms and on the campus I was associated with men, men and more men. In the evening when I played I was still among men. During the long hours of travel to the places at which we played, which were usually two or three hours distant from New Haven, I was with men; and as I sat among the men in the band, I had to watch other men with beautiful women in their arms, dancing to our music. I had to sit there and see beautiful women returning the ardor of the men with whom they were dancing, nestling close with eyes closed, cheek to cheek, wrapped in bliss and happiness, waltzing to the strains of our music; women with beautiful forms, in beautiful gowns well calculated to show these forms to the best advantage; women whose lips, artificially colored, stood out like vivid wounds or like tremulous petals, moist, warm and full of life, inviting the lips of the man whom they found appealing.

Maine Girls Not So Alluring.

I had been perfectly happy at the University of Maine, where the coeds were attractive but not so alluring as the girls that Yale men had down to their fraternity dances. At Maine my saxophone had given me, even in my first year, a bit of popularity so that the fellows were anxious to have me dance with the girls they brought to the dances. There was no drinking at Maine; very few, if any, girls smoked. The whole atmosphere was one of simplicity. Yet every one was happy. "Cutting in" was unknown, and the boy who possessed a fur coat or even a medium priced car, was to be envied indeed.

To be suddenly transplanted to a college in which were enrolled boys accustomed to having everything they wanted, and to see the beautiful women whom they brought to the dances was a very disturbing experience. I was never so miserable as at the first Yale fraternity dance at which I played. I did not expect prominence, I knew that I might go through Yale and never experience the admiration for my musical ability that I had known at the University of Maine, but the contrast was too great and I have never been so unhappy as that first night that I sat in the background and played from 10 o'clock in the evening until 5 in the morning with almost no stop, while good looking, well groomed and well dressed young men, feeling very gay, danced by me holding in their arms the most beautiful creatures that my eyes had ever seen; and when we went outside for a breath of air, I had to watch them walking arm in arm under the lantern lighs, or sitting and driving in the beautiful specially built foreign cars that these boys owned.

I had no right to be envious and unhappy, or to expect anything else but what was my lot, but, after all I had tasted of the spotlight, and had been a big frog in a small puddle. I was young and human, intensely so; I was trying to play music that had feeling, passion, and it was so hard to feel that I was always destined to have to play for the other fellow. I do not think any of the men in the orchestra with whom I played knew that I was so unhappy. Neither did I try to forget or drown my gloom with the refreshments that were served to us every two hours, which to the men were necessary stimulants to help them weather the long, hard stretches of continuous playing.

Gives His Best Without Alcohol.

I have always had a fierce pride in my musical work. I have always liked to feel that I could give my best cold sober, and it was always extraordinary in the eyes of the men for whom I played while at Yale that I was just as ready and eager to play the last hour in the morning as I was when we began in the early evening. I have known certain musicians who could only give their best when properly "ginned up." I am so thankful that in my own case I can give my best with no alcoholic "shot in the arm."

Therefore it was no wonder that when I did get a night off I did not stay in and study, do extra reading or go to a lecture that might be presented by some visiting celebrity, much as I wanted to do these things (for I always loved to study, never failed a course and kept my studies high). But I felt the absolute need of the company and companionship of some one of the opposite sex, since morning, noon and night I was under the strain of work always among men. Girls are comparatively scarce in New Haven, and those that are attractive are at a premium. Reflect that each New Haven girl of the type and age that a young collegian would like to know was sought for and could make her choice from 3,000 boys, most of whom were the pick of the land!

Fortunate in His Acquaintances.

The high school girls had their own sweethearts with whom they had grown up, and, of course, the natives of New Haven, or of any college town, are somewhat suspicious and loath to allow their daughters to go out with college men, who, though they may tarry in that town for four years, are somewhat comparable in their way to traveling salesmen; and I think that most girls in college towns have the feeling that they will be forgotten when the boys graduate, and left with the stigma of a college widow; that is, a girl who goes on year after year going out with the most popular boys in the college but never receives an offer of marriage from any of them, and only loses the chance of finding a real husband among the boys she has known all her life. The most attractive daughters of the elite in the college towns are themselves usually away at college, or finishing school, or are abroad.

I was extremely fortunate in meeting the two men with whom I played several nights before Yale opened. These two men, Yale graduates themselves still living in New Haven, practicing their professional occupations by day and playing by night, introduced me to people in the city that otherwise I probably never would have been fortunate enough to meet in my whole four years there. But even at that I found that most of the eligible girls in New Haven were spoken for, and as time went on I met girls in New York, Hartford and various other places, and though I could ill afford it, both financially and from a standpoint of health, I went to see these girls with my eyes aching from lack of sleep; that I might have the pleasure of an evening which, for me, amply rewarded all my efforts.

Women Would Pass Him By.

There are those who tell me that I have an attractive personality. That may or may not be, but it has often been my ironic fate to see women who I knew were trying to find a man who could give them affection and warmth, and say sweet things, but who looked at me and failed to see promise of any of these things in my physical exterior. It is nothing unusual for girls dancing by the band stand to ask me, "When will Mr. Vallee be here?" never dreaming for a moment that mine might be the voice that seemed so romantic and tender to them. In fact, in meeting most of the girls whom I have ever known, I was the aggressor. That is, they might have seen me dozens of times but never had any desire to know me. I usually asked for the introduction, and had to awaken an interest in these women. In other words, I have no illusions about myself, and for a time I dreaded personal appearances both on the stage and in the movies, since I realized that there was nothing intriguing or magnetic in my looks. However, I did realize that make-up could do a great deal for me and that a personality, if I had one, could make itself felt both on the stage or on the screen.

You will say that it is man's place to ask for the introduction, but I cite the following example to show what women will do if sufficiently intrigued by a handsome man. At the University of Maine, I knew the wonderful love and companionship of a chum, the only one I ever had in my life. We were fraternity brothers, shared everything, and played sax together on engagements.

The boy was strikingly good looking. He had been voted the most handsome man in college and had already captured the hearts of all the coeds. His good looks had a masculinity about them that the men admired, and yet he was a very modest and unassuming chap. We were inseparable. It was he who suggested that we transfer from Maine to Yale for financial as well as academic reasons, but after perswading me to transfer he found that he had failed in one course at Maine and could not transfer. I had become so enthused over the idea that I went through with it. At Christmas vacation my sophomore year at Yale, he came down to visit me in New Haven, and I saw to it that he was engaged to play with me at the various engagements we had throughout Connecticut.

"Beautiful But Dumb."

We went to those elite country clubs and golf clubs where the wealthy manufacturing society of Connecticut gives dances for its youth at vacation time, and at these very places, where I had played always unnoticed, this boy, as he sat playing next to me, created an immediate furor. The very girls who probably never knew that I had been there before, forced their partners to dance in front of him; they knocked his music over purposely; they even asked the leader who he was, and I remember two who asked for an introduction. It only goes to show that if a woman has enough interest, or to say it the other way, if the man is physically attractive enough, she will stop at nothing to meet him.

Of course there is this compensation. Very often, as in the case of the woman characterized as "beautiful but dumb," many a good looking man turns out to be very disappointing in mentality or in personality, despite his attractive appearance. My chum, however, was very fortunate in being extremely intelligent, likable and lovable, and the girls usually liked him all the more after they met him. But there are many men who fail to hold the interest after the introduction has been performed. In my own particular case I can truthfully say that it has been quite the opposite. My difficulty has been that, not having striking looks, I lacked the gateway and key to meeting the girl, and where a sponsor or an introduction was lacking I was at a complete loss because obviously I could not force myself upon a girl. I have been miserable several times in my life when I have seen unattached girls that I felt, as I saw them talking and dancing with others, would make me very happy if I could know them, but have failed to attract them or even—lacking an introduction—to meet them. I could only watch them from a distance when I might possibly have been able to give them some of the romance that I believe most women want. Still I am happy. Fate was very kind to me, and it would be absolutely ungrateful to be anything but thankful for what I have and am.

Does Not Desire the Spotlight.

I do not desire the spotlight. In fact, at the University of Maine, being the musical college lion embarrassed me tremendously. But anyone who knows the career of Johnny Mack Brown, one of our newest movie stars, will realize that what he says is only too true. Johnny was the football star and hero of his college and was welcomed home with a brass band and the keys of the city.

When he entered upon an ordinary business career, he missed the spotlight, and is frank enough to admit that he felt lost without the cheers and applause of the crowd. He therefore went to Hollywood and has become one of America's great film stars whom it gave me a great deal of pleasure to meet this summer.

It is hard to be the center of all attraction and then to suddenly be relegated to the background, to become, as it were, one of the designs on the wallpaper, some one to be heard but not seen. Yet I had a feeling that I was not always destined to remain in obscurity, and sure enough, my junior year the boys with whom I went to classes daily began to feel that I should meet and dance with their girls, and brought their girls to me for an introduction as I sat there playing, and sooner or later I usually had the pleasure of a dance, as the orchestra leader I played for was a Yale man himself, and knew that it was to his advantage to have one or more boys in his band who were not only eligible to dance with the guests but were asked by the ones for whom they were playing. I was very, very happy in my junior and senior years at Yale, and the breath-taking girls that I had once admired from a distance were now mine to know and to meet.

Met Mary Brian There.

That was how I first met Mary Brian. She had just made her first big picture, "The Little French Girl," and a boy at Yale who was Betty Bronson's cousin and who had met Mary through Betty had her down to Yale as his guest. I had not heard of her and wondered why he was so proud and insistent that I dance with the girl he had brought.

After I had been playing several hours he introduced me to her. We danced a few steps before I was "cut in" on by some one, but in those few steps I felt the urge to tell her that she had beautiful eyes, to which I added that she knew it only too well. About an hour later, two girls asked me if that was Mary Brian that I had been dancing with. I was not sure of her name, but I recalled that it was something like that. When they told me that I had been dancing with a picture star, I nearly collapsed, especially since I felt that I had given an impression of "throwing a line" by my compliment.

Mary and I met again this last summer while I was on the coast, and enjoyed many luncheons and evenings of dancing together. Her acquaintance is one of the sweetest things in my life.

Valentino's Popularity.

My first vivid realization of just how overwelmingly an individual may be admired came with Valentino's tour into Connecticut. Rather than fulfill the terms of his Paramount contract, Valentino had decided to go on tour as a dancer and judge of local beauty contests, using the armories in every city of importance. His tour in Connecticut included Bridgeport, Waterbury and Meriden. Although he had his own orchestra to play his tangoes, his managers engaged another to play for the public dancing which followed his act.

Bolton and Cipriano, the two men with whom I was playing while at Yale, were engaged to play for the dancing in these three cities. I had no idea of Valentino's tremendous popularity, but when we drove up to the armory in Bridgeport, the big crowd that was waiting outside the armory mistook our big car for Valentino's, and it was with difficulty that we succeeded in getting into the armory.

After that every time the door slammed there was a general mob rush for that door, and I pitied Valentino, if it really was he coming through the door. They spirited him away in some way, and I will never forget the faces of every one who saw him. There were admiration, worship and an agonized look of interest upon them that I had never seen before; and so it was at all three places, and each time the crowd could be held back only by strong ropes and burly policemen. In each case he received as much worship as any human being could receive. Peculiarly enough, I, too, admired him greatly. The more I watched his calm, gentlemanly behavior, the more I realized that he deserved this great adulation. Before this I had admired his acting, and I now saw that he was so genuinely human and so appealing that any woman was justified in the intense admiration that she might have for him.

Loneliness in New York.

Now that I, too, have many friends, I often remember my first impressions of New York City in the summer of 1923, when I, with a bunch of Yale boys, played for Gilda Gray at the Rendezvous in New York City. We all stayed in a group of fraternity houses which were empty during the vacation at Columbia University. We did not play Sunday nights, and I will never forget the extreme loneliness that all of us experienced during that summer in New York. None of us knew any one, and somehow we failed to meet any one, and on Sundays we wandered around Riverside Drive just as lonely as the sailors from the ships that happened to be at anchor in the Hudson. That summer made me hate New York; it was a summer of unhappiness that I will never forget.

On the Rules of Traffic

By WILLIAM ULLMAN

To stop an automobile anywhere on any thoroughfare in Washington is to park it, although some drivers believe they can stand their cars in a "no parking" zone if they remain with it and keep the engine running.

The traffic regulations state that to park "means to leave any motor vehicle standing on a public highway, whether or not attended." And to tell a policeman "I only intended to stand here a minute," won't help.

Example: A driver pulls up in front of the White House, where the signs read "No parking at anytime." He stops, intending to remain for a minute or so, but he has violated the regulations and is subject to arrest.

WHO'ZIT?

1. He was born in New York.
2. He served as a member of Congress.
3. He was a Vice President and a President of the United States.
4. Daniel Webster served in his Cabinet.
5. He was never elected President and the only time he ran for that office he received the electoral votes of only one State.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

"UNCLE JOE" GRUNDY is very much hurt and annoyed that Democratic and Progressive senators are tacking his name on the tariff measure now being adjusted in conference.

The references by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and Senator Gerald Nye, of North Dakota, to the tariff bill as a "Grundy" measure are actually shocking to the Pennsylvania senator. It is not his idea of a tariff bill at all, he explains.

Most emphatically not, he tells his constituents. On the contrary, it is a singularly unsatisfactory measure, from his standpoint. He is making this perfectly clear in his speeches in the Pennsylvania primary campaign.

* * * *

THESE rates which the Democrats and Progressives are vigorously attacking as too high, Mr. Grundy thinks, are actually absurdly inadequate to protect American industry and the American workingman. Moreover, not an unnecessary moment should be lost in revising all of them upward the moment the opportunity arrives.

Mr. Grundy has not bothered to ask his colleagues to stop associating his name with the bill. It is only the idea that shocks Mr. Grundy, not the effect which he perceives in Pennsylvania. Every time he is attacked by a Caraway from the Democratic camp or a Brookhart from the other extreme of the coalition line it helps Mr. Grundy in his fight in Pennsylvania. And Mr. Grundy needs plenty of help, as he himself fully realizes. He is up against a hard fight, and the odds are at the moment against him, favoring his opponent, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis.

* * * *

NOBODY in Pennsylvania is raising his voice against Mr. Grundy on the tariff issue. On the contrary, Mr. Davis would be very much obliged to the Democrats and Progressives if they would leave Grundy's name out of their attacks. They are making a hero of him.

But the fact is that Grundy in his speeches is attacking the bill just as hard, though from an entirely different angle, as Jouett Shouse's cohorts at Democratic national headquarters. He not only thinks the bill is terrible, but he is outlining a program of what Pennsylvania Republicans ought to do about it. He proposed, in a speech to a large gathering of Republican women in Philadelphia, that the delegation from the Keystone State to the next national Republican convention should be instructed to insist upon a plank in the platform providing for an immediate revision upward of the tariff!

* * * *

INCIDENTALLY James J. Davis, who has most of the organization backing in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, and Dr. Francis H. Bohlen, who is running for senator on a platform calling for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, were both present at this same meeting, and both made speeches defending the protective tariff principle.

* * * *

ONE thing is certain. Whatever may be the merits or demerits of Mr. Grundy's contention, leaders of both parties hope sincerely that it will be a long time before they have to face another general revision of the tariff.

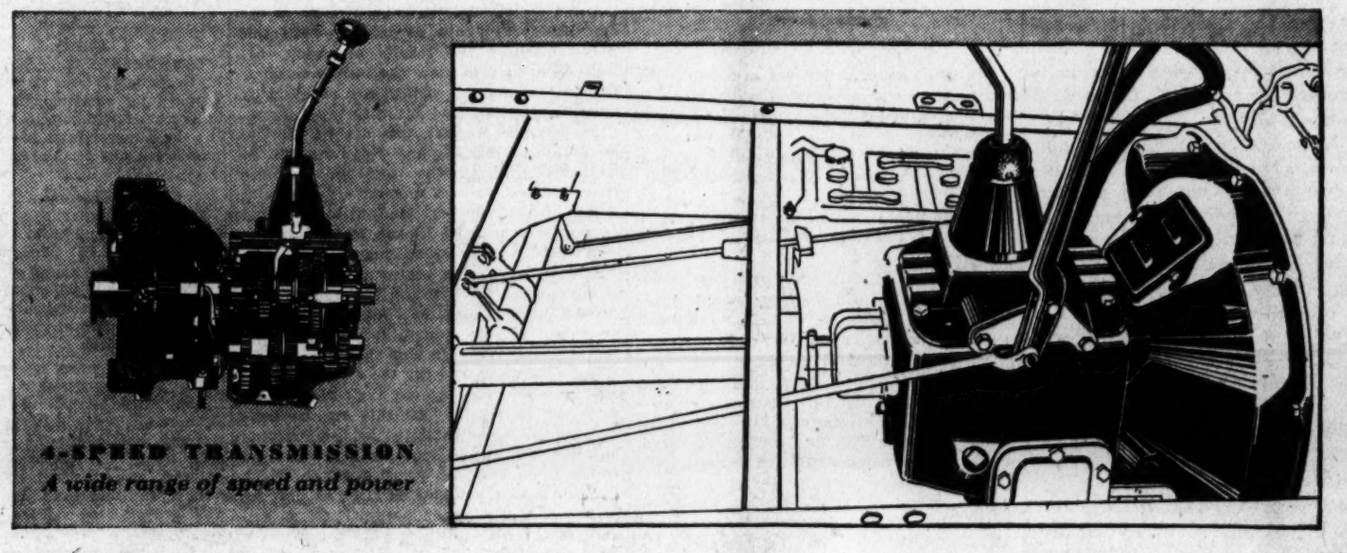
New features of the FORD TRUCK improve its performance



THE STRENGTH and simplicity of the Ford truck chassis provide a high degree of reliability, insuring long, satisfactory service, with marked economy. Of equal importance is the ability of the truck to do hard work easily, quickly and safely.

Many features of the Ford truck add to its capable performance. Among them is the 4-speed transmission, which gives a wide, flexible range of speed and power. This is of special value for pulling heavy loads out of pits, and for economical operation when greater speed is desirable.

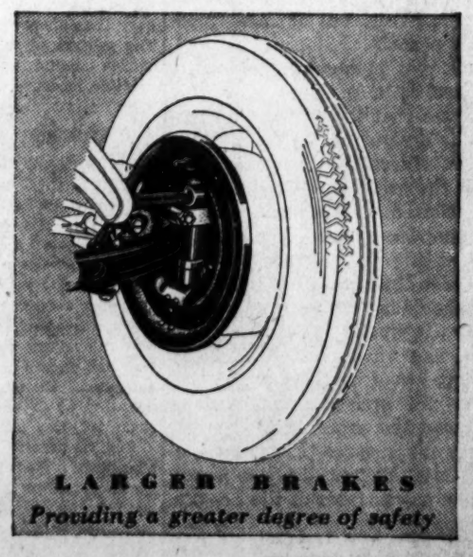
An unusual degree of safety is provided by the brakes. They are of the mechanical type, internal expanding, and all are fully enclosed.

Brakes on the front wheels have been enlarged to the same size as those on the rear, giving increased braking area. The redesigned controls operate with greater efficiency.

Other features which you will find of exceptional value are the new rear axle, which has a spiral bevel gear of special design, with straddle-mounted pinion; the large-sized opening provided in the transmission for power take-off mounting, for use with hoists and other equipment; and the dual rear wheels which can be installed at small additional cost.

Balloon tires of one size are used throughout with the dual equipment, so that all six steel disc wheels and tires are interchangeable all around. Only one spare need be carried.

Ford



In addition to the Ford 1½-ton truck chassis, there is a commercial-car chassis to meet light-delivery requirements. A wide range of body-types is available for each model.

1½-ton truck chassis, $520

With Stake body and closed cab $675
With Panel body $800
With Express body and closed cab $665
With Platform body and closed cab $660

(f. o. b. Detroit, plus freight and delivery). Dual Rear Wheels optional for $25. Universal Credit Company Plan of time-payments offers you another Ford economy.

ADVICE TO AMERICA.

President Hoover and the members and guests of the American Society of Newspaper Editors had the benefit of frank advice from two distinguished foreign journalists at the society's dinner on Saturday evening. M. Andre Geraud, speaking for France, and H. Wickham Steed, speaking for England, generously told the Americans that the United States shares responsibility for maintaining peace in Europe. These visitors, who can view Europe's problems free from the handicap of any prejudice in behalf of American tradition, joined in a perfect union of sentiment, quite in contrast with the spokesmen of their respective governments at the London naval conference. In London France and Great Britain reached a deadlock, but in Washington their self-appointed spokesmen rendered an exquisitely harmonious duet.

M. Geraud, better known as "Pertinax," warned his American hearers that "the European problem can not be solved as long as the attitude of America remains an unknown factor. Your nation," he said, "must take a position either positive or negative. You decline all responsibility. You even refuse to assist in enforcing international law, which is largely American law. In the end you will be forced to take some choice."

This reminder was especially forcible, coming from the spokesman of a nation that has maintained neither a positive nor a negative position at the London naval conference, which declined all responsibility for the five-power pact which it pretended to support, and which now isolates itself from the principal naval powers that have reached an agreement to limit naval forces.

Mr. Steed's part in the duet was to emphasize the importance of America agreeing in advance to accept the decision of Europe whenever it should declare a nation a violator of the Kellogg pact. "International peace," he said, "must be organized by the surrender on the part of every nation of the right to pass finally on its own international problems. Nations must allow other nations to take a hand in their decisions. They must take advantage of the opportunities for consultation through the world court, through arbitration, through conferences. The League of Nations is imperfect, but it is a good agency for peace."

Thus all that is required to insure world peace is a guarantee by the United States that it will fight on the side that is designated by the League of Nations. Since the league is controlled by the great powers, it follows that the United States would always fight on the side of the great powers, and against any nation that dared to run counter to their plans. If India, for example, should insist upon a war of independence, it would be denounced by the league as a violator of the Kellogg pact, and it would be the duty of the United States to assist Great Britain in putting down the war. Many Americans ignorantly suppose that India is a vassal of Great Britain, but this is not true. India is a member of the League of Nations, and India has separately adhered to the Kellogg pact. So that is settled.

America now knows where it stands. If it wants world peace, let it "allow other nations to take a hand in its decisions." Let it accept responsibility for peace in Europe, and cheerfully obey the summons of the League of Nations whenever it is necessary to overawe a nation that refuses to obey. India, Egypt, Syria, Morocco, Palestine, Soviet Russia or China may need discipline at any time. Europe will be embarrassed unless the United States agrees to support it in any war it may decide to wage.

The courageous action of Messrs. Geraud and Steed in telling America where its duty lies can not fail to stir up a furore of enthusiasm in Europe, if not in this country.

THE NYE COMMITTEE.

Reports that the newly appointed Senate committee on campaign expenditures will not make current investigations into primary activities are disappointing. The committee seems to have authority to do this work. In several States the senatorial primary campaigns are waxing fast and furious, notably in Pennsylvania, and a call for itemized expenditures is already in order.

Little good has been accomplished by investigations dealing with campaigns that have been closed and forgotten. The Senate in two cases has refused to seat senators who were actually elected. The determination of the Senate to exclude claimants whose campaign expenditures were regarded as excessive could be accomplished only by violating the Constitution. The newly appointed campaign committee can adopt a better method of checkmating the election of men by the excessive use of money, and that is by making strict current inquiry into the use of money while the primary campaign is on.

It is not probable that the managers of senatorial primary campaigns would indulge in reckless and perhaps corrupt expenditure of huge sums of money if a subcommittee of the Senate were on guard, requiring daily or weekly itemized reports, and summoning witnesses to verify these reports. The committee can call for papers, and is in a position to stop corruption at the source. Since the chief purpose of the Senate in creating this committee is to prevent the seating of senators whose election has been procured by the excessive and corrupt use of money, why should not Senator Nye's committee begin operations at once, instead of waiting until the damage has been done?

TAXICABS SHOULD BE REGULATED.

Richmond B. Keech, people's counsel before the Public Utilities Commission, takes an untenable position when he opposes the proposed legislation giving the commission power to regulate taxicabs. His argument is that if the commission should have power to limit the number of taxicabs there would be a reduction of competition and consequently higher rates.

If the Public Utilities Commission has any power and sense of duty it will not permit extortionate taxicab rates in Washington. The present danger does not lie in threatened excessive rates, but in the other direction. Unregulated and irresponsible taxicab outfits are crowding the streets, adding to traffic congestion and offering inferior service. All taxicab concerns should be held legally responsible for injuries to passengers resulting from bad equipment or negligence. They are common carriers, and should be subject to regulation like all other common carriers.

The Public Utilities Commission should have power to regulate the number of taxicabs, to require them to be safe and comfortable, and to fix rates. Questions of throttled competition and excessive rates can be met when they arise, if the commission is given power to deal with them.

METROPOLITAN OPERA.

Next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the Metropolitan Opera Company will appear in Washington under the auspices of the Washington Opera Association. Wednesday evening "La Boheme" will be presented. Thursday an opera new to Washington, namely, "Andrea Chenier," will be sung. The season will be brought to a conclusion with a matinee presentation on Friday of "La Traviata."

The cultural life of the Capital is incomplete in that there is no national opera. Some day such an institution will be established. Pending that day, the music lovers of Washington must content themselves with the annual visit of the New York company. These visits are doubly important, because they help to cultivate a taste for opera in the public, a taste which, if carefully nurtured, will lead to a demand for the creation of a national opera.

Such stars as Gigli, Tibbett, De Luca, Martinelli and Bori will appear during the Washington season. The full resources of the Metropolitan company will be drawn upon for the performances. Washington will have the opportunity to see opera at its best. The venture of the Washington Opera Association should be supported in the fullest possible measure.

CHEAPER MEDICAL SERVICE.

Dr. Shirley Wynne, health commissioner of New York City, has been waging an admirable campaign against quackery and medical chicanery. His latest proposal is that the health department in cooperation with the medical society set a standard scale of prices for medical service and surgical operations and then establish service bureaus to which those in need of attention could apply to obtain the names and addresses of physicians who had agreed to charge no more than the fixed fees. Medicine, says Dr. Wynne, in justification of the fixed fee scheme, should be organized on a business basis.

But the practice of medicine is an art, not a business. Medicine should not and can not be organized on a business basis. It may be argued, justly, that the white-collar wage earner is usually hard put to obtain satisfactory medical service. The poor man, through free clinics, can command the best physicians and surgeons, but the average wage earner can not afford to pay the regular fees of first-class medical men and, since he is too proud to accept charity, he is frequently left to the mercy of the quack or charlatan. It is to fight the advertising physician that Dr. Wynne would establish fixed fees and medical service bureaus. He would also have the profession liberalize its code of ethics to countenance the use of periodical and newspaper advertising by its members.

A way must be found to make available to the white-collar group the best of medical services and facilities. The way, however, does not lie in degrading the art of medicine to the level of commercial transactions. Not through advertising and not through mass organization will the plight of the middle-class man be relieved. The only workable solution that has been proposed is that eminent physicians and first-class hospitals be endowed, to serve the public at extremely low rates. Physicians and surgeons can not be expected to finance this public service.

MR. POLI MAKES A MISTAKE.

Mr. Poli, lessee of Poli's Theater in this city, has intimated that he will resist the effort of the Government to clear away the block in which the theater is located. This property occupies land that is designed for park purposes, as a part of the general plan for the development of the National Capital.

Mr. Poli is a naturalized citizen who has made a fortune in this country, thanks to his own industry and the opportunities that have been opened for him. It does not come with good grace from him to obstruct the Government's building program, after he has enjoyed the benefit of several years of cheap rental of Government property.

In Oakwood, Ill., Norman Oakwood, 22, defeated his father in the race for mayor. Further evidence that the younger generation is going to the dogs.

The practice of boiling lobsters alive is scored in Parliament as inhumane. Surely, however, it's no more so than roasting wild jackasses.

Accidents, say statisticians, cost the United States 500,000,000 work days annually. Safety-first and unemployment go hand in hand!

In simple language, Gov. Roosevelt's plea is for some system that won't turn all the fruits of legislative labor into last-minute jams.

BEAUTIFUL WASHINGTON

From the Christian Science Monitor.

At the expense of the people of the United States, who will very properly and very cheerfully foot the bill, efforts are under way to make Washington the most beautiful capital in the world. Nature has contributed little to this end. Much of the site of the city is on low ground, and the Potomac itself, as it flows past the town, is but a sluggish stream with marshy shores and low-lying islands. The genius of a French city planner, L'Enfant, laid out the plan for city development which utilized whatever of beauty there might be available, and heavy expenditures for landscape gardening, parking and architecture have been made in the last half century in accordance with this plan. Already the results are such that Americans love to view the beauty of their Capital, and foreign visitors are enthusiastic over its dignified and beautiful appearance.

In only one respect was nature particularly kind to Washington. Not far from the western border of the town the Potomac River rushes through a narrow gorge with a fall of some 50 feet, and with its turbid current impeded and broken by all sorts of rocky ledges, crags and cataracts. The Great Falls of the Potomac are so near the city as to form a picturesque and convenient playground for the people. As yet little has been done for its development, for the construction of motorways to the shores of either side of the river, and for the ejection of the squatters who have placed their shanties at commanding points. All this can be done and indeed is contemplated by the Cramton bill, now before the House, setting aside the Great Falls and the gorge through which they rush as a national park. The purpose of the bill is commendable. It is as important to the future of Washington as a beautiful city as is the architectural development of the Mall, the building of the Memorial Bridge to Arlington, or the maintenance of Rock Creek Park.

Against the bill only one influence has been raised, an influence which in all parts of the United States is coming to be regarded with suspicion and aversion. The utility companies, the power interests, see in the Great Falls an opportunity to turn beauty into dividends for a limited number of stockholders. They would harness the Potomac and turn its rushing forces into electric light and power. For the good of the people of the city, they say. But Washington is not, and should not be, a manufacturing city. The power argument is negligible. To save in the cost of their electric light, is the continuing argument. But the history of the development of power companies has seldom shown that the economies resulting from the utilization of beauty spots for this purpose have profited customers rather than stockholders.

Developed as a park, with its rushing cataracts, and boiling caldrons, and steep crags and precipices, the Potomac Falls will add to the attractions which now bring to Washington hundreds of thousands of people annually, bent upon sight-seeing. Only a few days ago the fact that the cherry trees by the basin in Potomac Park were in bloom resulted in such a rush of outside motorists to Washington that the police were hardly able to cope with the throng. If beauty so evanescent that it lasts scarcely ten days has such economic value as this, what should be said of the worth to the city of a continuing spectacle such as the Potomac presents in its burst through the Alleghenies?

American cities have been slow to appreciate the economic value of beauty. Washington, of all cities, is in the best position to understand and to profit by it.

MAN'S LAST THOUGHT.

Sir Douglas Mawson, Antarctic explorer, was making a side trip at the time he was with the Shackleton expedition some years ago and fell into a crevasse with a sled that carried his supply of food.

The sled was buried with the food, says the Los Angeles Times, but Sir Douglas fell on a ledge, where he remained for some hours, expecting that the ledge would give. He was 30 miles from camp and had no hope of rescue. He was asked what his thoughts were after he had abandoned all hope of life. "I thought what a d—d shame it was to let all that good food go to waste."

STRUGGLE.

If in the end some good remain
Shall we regret its birth in pain?
If at the last some splendor shows
Shall we regret the hammer blows,
The flaming fire, the smoke and grime
Of truth's preparatory time?

Out of the ugliness of things
If at the last true beauty springs,
And triumph crowns all battles lost
Shall we regret the strength it cost?
Does aught continue long to please
Which can by all be done with ease?

Who rightly views the scenes of life
Sees all achievement born of strife.
All growth is pain, and this is sure,
Who strives for much must much endure.
'Tis only after toilsome years
The greatness of the soul appears.

The Joker in the Contract Is Printed in Very Small Type

By ROBERT QUILLEN

WHEN people assemble in their churches in time of war to pray for victory, their petitions are phrased in vague terms that conceal their meaning.

"Give us a victory," they pray; but they do not expect or plead for a bloodless miracle, and when their prayer is translated it means: "Enable us to kill and maim thousands of young men and fill the enemy's land with heart-broken parents and widows and hungry orphans."

And thus a proposal of marriage must be translated to make its meaning clear.

When a young man who is spoiled and petty and selfish proposes to a girl no more worthy than himself, he says in effect: "Let us go through a religious ceremony that will enable us to live together as mates until our inevitable bickering makes us hate one another and separate."

And many another proposal, translated by one who can reason from cause to effect, is an outrageous and horrible suggestion that means: "Let us become mates and bring into the world malformed and idiot children that will shame us and burden civilization."

Young people blinded by love see only one another, made perfect by imagination, but a marriage is an alliance with a family and thus a proposal says in effect: "Will you marry me and after a few months of happiness resign yourself to self-denial in order that I may care for my invalid parents and send my brother to school? And will you live in a home atmosphere made horrible by the presence of my idiot sister?"

In the great majority of cases, marriage is a pleasant, wholesome union that affords joy enough to compensate for its drawbacks, for the majority of people are sane and healthy and decent.

But to make the contract without investigating its conditions is to trust wholly to luck and invite a tragic ending.

There should be an exchange of health certificates, whereby each proves himself free of communicable disease, and there should be an examination of family records to guard against continued inheritance of epilepsy, syphilis, tuberculosis and insanity.

When one is invited to go for a ride, it is the part of common prudence to inquire whether the invitation includes a safe return.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

IF OUR OWN CONGRESS DEBATED LOBSTER BOILING.

"House of Commons debates boiling of lobsters as a humane method of killing them."—News item.

Senator Heflin—Mr. Speaker, I rise to denounce as barbarous and unworthy of a civilized country the practice of cooking lobsters by dumping them alive into a pot of hot water. I wish to . . .

Senator Caraway—Has the gentleman from Alabama any evidence that the lobster suffers unduly?

Senator Heflin — I understand that . . .

Senator Caraway—Never mind what you understand. Have you had any complaints?

Senator Heflin—I have not heard directly from the lobsters one way or the other. Do I understand the gentleman from Arkansas to contend that a lobster does not mind being boiled alive?

Senator Caraway—I do not. I make no pretensions of knowing anything about a lobster's reactions in boiling water. Nor do I think the gentleman from Alabama has any such knowledge.

Senator Wheeler—Will the gentleman yield? Thanks. It has been my privilege to give the matter some study. I have listened often with an ear to the pot when lobsters were cooking and I can say without fear of contradiction that their groans are pitiful.

Senator Caraway—How can you tell when a lobster is groaning?

Senator Wheeler—Does the gentleman contend that the lobster may have been laughing?

Senator Caraway—I am not a student of a lobster's emotional life.

Senator Robinson—Have any of you gentlemen ever been in a kettle of hot water?

Senator Caraway—I think I can safely say for myself and colleagues that this is none of the gentleman's business. We are not exactly lobsters.

Senator Robinson—Not exactly, I admit. I hold with Senator Heflin that the boiling of lobsters alive is inhumane and that we owe it to the lobsters to do something.

Senator Caraway—We owe nothing to lobsters.

Senator Robinson—But how about clams?

Senator Caraway—How about them?

Senator Robinson—We might as well go into the matter thoroughly and impartially. Do you deny a clam suffers when being cooked?

Senator Caraway—My position on suffering among clams is well known.

Senator Wheeler—What is your position on clams? And do you mean soft-shelled or round?

Senator Caraway—I refer the gentleman to my public speeches.

Senator Wheeler—I claim this proves the senator's inherent cruelty and heartlessness. He is the kind of man who probably eats oysters raw without compunction.

Senator Caraway—This is beside the point.

Senator Wheeler—Will the gentleman deny he eats oysters raw?

Senator Caraway — I will neither deny nor affirm it.

Senator Wheeler — Have you ever eaten winkles uncooked?

Senator Caraway—Don't you stand there and winkle me.

Senator Wheeler—I'm not winkling you.

Senator Caraway—I would not put it above you, sir.

The Presiding Officer—The chair feels that winkles may not properly be discussed at this time. Lobsters, oysters and clams, perhaps, but no winkles.

Senators (in a chorus)—What! No winkles.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Comment on Literary Digest Poll—Prohibition or Government Monopoly the Only Solution of the Liquor Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the poll now being conducted by the Literary Digest relative to sentiment toward prohibition, the repeal column seems to be larger than either that for enforcement or modification, though not more than both. The repeal or wet element claims that many, perhaps most of the modificationists are in favor of repeal rather than for retention of the amendment, while the drys claim that most, if not all, of these votes should be counted on the dry side. This seems reasonable, because if the people who voted for modification only had really wanted the amendment abrogated, they would have voted for repeal instead of only for a modification of the law. If there had been only the two issues, enforcement or repeal, to be voted on, probably the considerable majority would have voted in favor of enforcement.

The objection to the modification idea is that if the manufacture and sale of beer and wine and other drinks containing a higher percentum of alcohol were legalized, there would have to be breweries and distilleries and places at which to sell these beverages, and that this would be practically a revival of the liquor traffic, and a return at least in some degree of the saloon. It would then probably be legal to sell these beverages at soft drink stands and at stores, and inferentially to children as well as to adults. Would we like this? I think not; for the use of these alcoholic drinks would create a taste or appetite for them in young persons and keep alive this appetite for stimulants in older persons. It is doubtful if it would cause much diminution of the bootleg industry, because as a rule, bootleggers deal in something stronger than beer and wine, which do not satisfy the cravings of the bootleggers' patrons.

Aside from absolute prohibition, there is no way to handle the liquor business except to make its manufacture, importation, transportation and sale a Government monopoly. Then it would be possible for those who need liquor for scientific, mechanical or medicinal purposes to obtain it in a legitimate way, and without violating or causing somebody else to violate the law. Incidentally it would be a big blow to moonshining and bootlegging.

J. C. WATKINS.
Kanawha Falls, W. Va., April 18.

Mr. Bleacher Counts His Geese a Little Early, But He Has Encouraging Statistics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As everybody knows, Clark Griffith is not much given to empty boasting. But already, although his club has played only three games, winning two, through last year's cloud he sees a silver lining. Surmising that "this is the best looking ball club we have had since 1925," he says, "It is early to say just what the others have got, but we have a nice baseball club." As an indication of confidence, such a confession by the Old Fox is as sure as the expert estimate of the wildest fan.

It is true that it doesn't take much to inspire baseball confidence in the spring, and I myself can figure out a winning season for the Griffs, although but three games have been played.

In those three games three players have a home run each to his credit—Cronin, West and Bluege. Myer, who is apt at any time to beat the ball home inside the fence, besides Recruit Webb as well as others may be expected to do the trick now and then as the season progresses. In addition to these "little geese" Big Goose Goslin may be depended on to pole out many a four-bagger.

Give us but half as many home runs per game as have been accumulated thus far and the aggregate at the end of the season will be 77. These, combined with timely slugging in other categories, should account for a season's batting average of well over .600. With even fair to middling pitching and smooth infield and outfield work, at least a place in the first division would be assured.

Of course, the foregoing is only in the nature of a rough guess. But there is every prospect that the club's batting will be a great improvement over that of last year; and as a natural-born fan I do maintain that three homers in the first three games is a good sign. Come on, geese!

HENRY WARD BLEACHER.

Memorial to Jefferson Lacking in Federal City.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, Mary E. Lazenby, objects to my plea for an "adequate" monument to Thomas Jefferson in Washington on the ground that "he has just the monument he would like, not only in Washington but throughout the land—a shrine in millions of hearts." That is the monument any great man would prefer.

Washington would prefer such a monument to the famous shaft erected in his name. Such a monument would please Lincoln better than his costly memorial in Potomac Park. But it does not follow that if they returned to life they would object to our marble testimonials to their greatness. Nor is it likely that Jefferson, if he could be consulted, would raise any serious objections to the memorial I have in mind. For otherwise, I think he would be glad to be suitably remembered through the efforts of the great party of which he was the founder, if not by the great republic he helped to establish. Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln comprise a political trinity which is universally revered, and so long as Jefferson lacks an adequate public memorial the embellishment of the Federal City will be incomplete.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Tea Is Planned By Pen Women At Convention

Mrs. Kathleen Norris Will Be Guest of Honor at First Session.

MRS. CLARENCE M. BUSCH, national president of the National League of American Pen Women, and Mrs. Kathleen Norris, author, will be guests of honor at a tea to be given this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock by the District of Columbia branch of the league in its studio at Stoneleigh Court, when Mrs. William H. Moses, District president, and the members of her branch, who are official hostesses to the biennial convention of the National League, now in session at the Willard Hotel, will greet the delegates, alternates and visiting Pen Women.

A group of representatives from official and residential Washington society will also be guests and several from out of town will be present, including Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, Mrs. Ernest Thompson-Seton, of Greenwich, Conn.; Mr. John Galishaw, a short-story writer, of New York; Mr. Charles Shoemaker, of Philadelphia; Miss Mary Badger Wilson and Miss Mathilde Elker, novelist, Mrs. E. G. Cullum, wife of Maj. Cullum, is in charge of arrangements.

Alternating at the tea table will be the executive officers of Mrs. Moses' administration, Mrs. Bess Heath Olmstead, Mrs. W. W. Badgley, Miss Nellie Thomas, Miss Anne Manchester, Mrs. Elizabeth Hughes Collister, Mrs. Lillian John, Mrs. Charles W. Allen, Mrs. Ida Donnelly Peters, Mrs Aaron D. Newman and Miss Jean Stephenson.

The tea will follow immediately after the authors' breakfast, which is to be a brilliant event of today at the Willard Hotel, opening the biennial convention, at 12 o'clock, and continuing through the early hours of the afternoon.

Tonight Mrs. Kathleen Norris will receive with Mrs. Busch at the latter's reception in the presidential suite of the Willard at 9 o'clock, when the national officers, delegates, alternates and visiting Pen Women will be guests of the national president of the league, Mrs. Clarence M. Busch. The national officers have been invited to assist.

Mr. and Mrs. Belmont Leave for Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont will leave Washington today for New York, whence they will sail on Friday for Europe. They will return in July to Balcourt, their estate at Newport.

Mrs. J. Wilmer Biddle will arrive today from Kenmore Manor, her country home in Virginia, to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman for a few days.

Prince Emil Sturza, of Roumania, was the guest for the week-end of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Dashiell Wright at their home in Mount Ida, Va. He was accompanied by Mr. Edward Downing, of the Engineers Aircraft Corporation, Stamford, Conn.

Mrs. Lewis Stewart and Miss Francesca Stewart have gone to Morristown, N. J., and New York before sailing on the Western Land Friday to pass the summer abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Waddy Wood have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Hadow and their small son, Ian Lindsay. Mr. Lindsay is a member of the British Foreign Service.

Your Mattresses Made New Like This

He couldn't sleep late in the morning. He was tired of sleeping by sun-up—a proverbial early riser. Now all this is changed. He welcomes an added hour or two of sleep. It is all because his wife sent the mattresses here to be made new.

The sleep-producing difference between your old mattresses and a new one is amazing. Try it.

Let us make your old mattress into a sanitary buoyant new one. Phone us and a representative will call promptly with sample book of attractive tickings from which to select a new covering.

Your old mattress will then be taken to our plant and put through a sterilizer. There 230 degrees of heat kills all germs. The hair or felt is taken out—run through a cleaner—every particle of dirt is removed. Then the hair or felt is put into charming brand-new ticking you select.

The work is done in one day at a cost of only $4 to $9.

Come to the Apple Blossom Festival

April 24th and 25th

DOWN in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, one of the garden spots of America, a paradise awaits you -- a paradise of apple blossoms, delicately white tinted with pink -- marvels of grace, beauty and fragrance. There are other blossoms too, in full bloom -- the whole scene of myriad colors displayed against the famous Blue Ridge Mountains, a background of fresh, verdant green.

No painting, no picture, no words can adequately describe the loveliness that awaits you in the Valley and motorists from nearly every state in the Union make this annual pilgrimage.

The festival, a two-day celebration, is held at Winchester, where scores of Virginia's young women compete with the blossoms at the Shrine of Beauty. All up and down the Valley are scenes of historical interest. Drive to the Apple Blossom Festival over Virginia's new system of excellent arterial highways. You can make it Amoco all the way.

A Hopeless Case

Jack Kline was walking down the main street of Langres, France, just at dusk, when he passed Lieut. Col. Griessinger without saluting.

Kline was immediately called to attention and told to salute, which he did. He was then instructed to always be on the alert and always salute. Kline, not being able to distinguish a gold leaf from a silver leaf in the fast falling darkness, replied, "All right, major." At this point Col. Griessinger proceeded to hit the sky and talked so fast and said so much that Kline could not keep step with him. He ended up by saying, "And I want you to know that I am a lieutenant colonel." Unfortunately Kline did not hear all of his latter remarks and when he replied, "All right, lieutenant," Col. Griessinger had reached the stage where he was speechless. He finally uttered "Aw, hell," turned and walked away.

Real Soothsayer

While in Paris is post-war days, I made the acquaintance of a Belgian girl who was working with an American welfare organization. She asked me to accompany her on a visit to a Hindoo soothsayer who was located in Paris. "Being a Hindoo," she said, "he speaks English, and so you can easily understand him. But he also speaks French, so I can understand him too."

On Saturday afternoon we set out for a street just east of the Montmartre section. It was a side street, but fairly respectable. We knocked at the entrance to the number we sought and were received by a middle-aged French woman, who announced that the "professor" was out, but would return shortly. We decided to wait and were ushered into a small parlor. Before long the French woman appeared and said that the "professor" would see us one at a time. The Belgian girl went in first and presently emerged wearing the rapt expression of one who had "dipped into the future."

Upon entering, the "professor" asked whether I wished palmistry or crystal-gazing. Sizing up the "professor," I decided not to hold hands under any guise and chose the crystal-gazing. The "professor's" line was very good and highly profesional, but has no bearing on this story. When he had finished, I asked, "Are you a Tennessee or a Carolina nigger?"

"I'se from Raleigh," was the reply.

My hat is always off to my fellow Carolinians when they are making good and so the Belgian girl still thinks she was counseled by a Hindoo seer.

He Was Welcome

Private Probst, a boy from Baltimore, was in a calloused frame of mind, and firmly believed that nothing which might happen could arouse the mere animal-like spirit that seemed to pervade human sensibilities.

It was not until one night Probst, with six other men and myself, were caught in a heavy barrage, the result of which was that several of the men around us were killed. Seeking safety, we took refuge in a little ravine just below an old sunken road, and after things quieted down, we decided to dig in for a little more comfortable rest before joining our outfit. All had their one blanket, except Probst, who had discarded everything except his knapsack. After all had rolled up in their blankets for a snooze, Probst sought out some one to share part of his bunk with him, but to no avail. Finally, he saw a man just a little to one side of where we were, who was comfortably stretched out as though asleep for some time. Thinking him to be one of our number, Probst quietly slipped in beside him and gently drew half of his blanket over himself. I could not sleep, and as I lay awake for some time, watching the flares off in the distance, I was surprised to see Probst scramble to his feet as though bitten by a snake or something. Because of his queer actions, I immediately got to him, to learn that Probst had just discovered his "bedmate" was dead, and that he upon being disturbed by what he thought was water running down on his face, was in fact blood from the wound of the dead comrade. Probst was unnerved; he wanted to get away from there, but not until he knelt down to word a prayer for the comrade who, though dead, shared his blanket with him.

Anything to Oblige

The Eighth Division was mobilized at Camp Fremont; Gen. Morrison commanding.

Along the officers' row there extended the usual post. A recruit sentry was incidentally doing his first tour of guard duty there; the corporal had diligently instructed him the art of "presenting arms" to officers as prescribed in the book.

Obviously the recruit was quite unfamiliar as to who were officers until the corporal had described to him in brief detail the various insignias worn by them from a lieutenant on up to a colonel.

Evidently the sentry on this post did not exactly realize that "present arms" constituted a salute, but apparently considered it some sort of military formality for the amusement of officers, and was getting along immensely when along came the general.

The recruit eyed him with suspicion—he had no conception as to what a general was—nor what to do under the circumstances. Sensing the situation the general asked the sentry what he did when an officer approached, whereupon the sentry replied "I do the present arms." The general then introduced himself in the usual way; the recruit, after a moment of thoughtful reflection, asked, "How would it be for some bayonet exercise for the general?"

Here's the Reward

During the war while I was attached to the intelligence section at naval headquarters in London, we received all the letters which had been written by American sailors and held up for one reason or another by the British. Attached to each of these unpassed letters was a slip filled out by the British censors, and some of their comments were most amusing.

One American gob had written to a friend in the United States: "Be sure to look under the stamp, there is something there I couldn't put in the letter." He had pasted an unused two-cent stamp on the last page. The entry made by the British was the following: "Stamp lifted, disclosed harmless message." The harmless message referred to was SOME STICKER!

Evidently the boy wanted to play a little joke on the censors, and if he could have seen the entry they made, I am sure he would have felt well rewarded for his trouble.

Je Parle Francais

The Rainbow Division had arrived in France and Sergt. X. had immediately purchased a little pamphlet of French and English, and was busily engaged in learning to speak French, as he wanted to locate his brother, who had preceded him and was then on military police duty somewhere in France.

Passing through one town where there were French M. P's. on duty, Sergt. X. approached one of them and inquired—in his best French (?), "Monseur M. P., havez yous seen my brother, his name is so and so?"

FISHER COMMENDS TREND TO DIVERSIFICATION IN INDUSTRY

Auto Accessories Enlarge Scope of Manufacturing

Finding New Uses for Original Output Enables Industry to Buoy Sales in Important Departments; Trains Have Motor Car Roller Bearings.

By IRVING FISHER
(Professor of Economics, Yale University).
Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., April 20.—The modern trend to diversification of business, thus reducing investment risks, is nowhere better shown than in the industry of making automobile parts and accessories. Because those in the high places have created wider—indeed, new—fields for their products, there is added assurance that this industry will have a good year financially, even if its parent business, automobiles, should happen to fall far below the 1929 mark.

The accessory industry's theory of diversification is slightly different from that ordinarily found. Many large corporations have protected themselves against falling profits by the manufacture of some product which has no direct connection with their original output. General Motors, among others, went into the manufacture of an electric refrigerator. The automobile accessories men, however, have diversified their business, not in the sense of making a new product but in the uses made of their original output. That is, they have diversified the market outlets. An example of this is seen in the case of a roller-bearing company, which has developed a new possible source of business with the railroads. This company recently equipped a freight train complete with roller bearings, which is now being tested out over the Pennsylvania Railroad. Auto horns are utilized in factories and in village fire departments for signaling. Auto greasing systems are extended to other types of machinery. This may rightly be called diversification in outlet.

Fairly Promising Outlook.

The hope for 1930 in the automobile parts and accessories industry must be considered fairly promising. Improvement over the low period of last fall already is noticeable. For purposes of comparison, the Motor and Equipment Association has compiled a sales index with 1925 equaling 100. For further clarification, the products of the industry are divided into four divisions. "Repair parts" refers to products used in replacing worn materials in automobiles already in use. The index for this group stood at 137 for January, 1930. For December, 1929, the index was 132, while for January, 1929, it stood at 141. This really constituted a normal output.

"Garage equipment" refers to tools and other equipment used by mechanics in servicing automobile owners. This index, which stood at 172 for January, 1929, fell to 119 for December, 1929, and rose to 135 for January, 1930.

"Original equipment," now by far the largest item of the industry's output, consists of parts supplied to automobile factories in the manufacture of new cars. This index was 212 for January, 1929; 34 for December, 1929, and rose to 135 for January, 1930. This represents the considerable increase caused by the sudden speeding up of automobile building since the holiday season. One other group, "accessories," which means detachable extra parts bought direct by the automobile consumer, stood at 79 for January, 1930, as against 77 for December, 1929.

The action of the two latter groups presents a usable history and prophetic pointer of the industry as a whole.

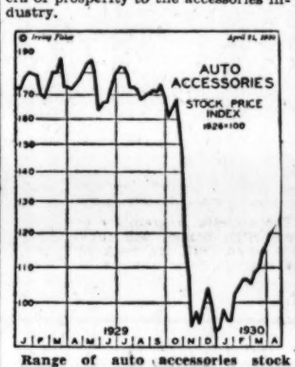
To begin with, the accessories group, as can be gleaned from its present index of 79, has fallen from the 1925 par as much as the other divisions have risen. This means simply that extra equipment like motometers, bumpers, clocks, speedometers—even radio statuary—are not being bought in quantities as formerly by the automobile owner. Two reasons are responsible for this; a disinclination of the average driver to decorate his car with extraneous art, and the fact that most of the practical accessories are now included in the original job as released by the factory.

This tendency brought about a new condition in the period following the war, in that motor car manufacturers more and more turned to centralizing their product. They themselves made as much as possible of the parts and accessories in their own plants. It was especially true of Ford, but other makers also called attention to their facilities for integration.

Integration Idea Dropped.

For a time this threatened disaster to the companies in the accessories industry. But during 1927 Ford began manufacture of the Model A car, and found that his factory could not produce fast enough even with new machinery. He abandoned his principle of integration, and has since used an increasing number of purchased parts.

Other automobile makers began throwing junior editions of their models on the market, and did it so hurriedly that they were forced to call upon accessory manufacturers to supply some of their parts. All this contributed to bringing about a new era of prosperity to the accessories industry.



Range of auto accessories stock prices, showing acceleration of recovery from November, 1929.

At present this industry is suffering from the general business depression, although it has recently felt the impetus of large orders from the automobile field. More and more, however, these companies are fortifying themselves against further drastic decline by widening their distribution to other businesses or are making new equipment for kindred fields. The accessories industry is attempting to enlarge its scope, and its ambition may be expected to bring about good results for 1930.

(Irving Fisher Service.)

There was no steady downward movement in last week's hesitant stock market, but the trend of prices was slightly off, with gains recorded only on Tuesday and Thursday. From the high of 165.6 on April 11, prices sagged to 163.9 at the close on Thursday, netting a loss of 1 per cent over the trading week.

Of the 320 stocks listed in the Fisher index, 52 per cent were off in price at the week's close as compared with the preceding week's close: 22 per cent were up, and 28 per cent showed no change.

The farm machinery group with the aid of Case and International Harvester rose by 4 per cent, closing at 411.5 from a low of 236.3. The stores group, on an upward trend for three weeks, gained 2.6 per cent, closing at the highest point since March 10. Montgomery Ward, National Tea, and Hahn Department Stores made conspicuous gains. In the electrical group a heavy loss on Wednesday was recouped Thursday, closing the week up by 1.3 per cent, only 0.3 point below the high for the year. Chemicals, tobaccos and radios again became active, rising by 0.3 to 1.1 per cent.

Motors suffered a loss of 4.5 per cent from the high on April 11, with Chrysler and Packard leading the decline while General Motors held steady. Office equipment group fell by 3.6 per cent; household products by 3.5 per cent; auto accessories by 3.3 per cent; oils by 2.8 per cent, with Standard of New Jersey leading the decline; coppers reached a new low of 173.4 April 17, after the cut to 14 cents a pound for raw copper, with a loss of 1.9 per cent, and utilities and rails were off by 1.5 per cent each.

Trading Values Decline.

A 19 per cent decline in value of common industrial stock tradings last week on the New York Stock Exchange found eleven groups lower and nine groups up, as compared with the preceding week. But public utilities rose conspicuously by 16 per cent, with rails, stores and tobacco advancing. Radio and theater stocks fell by nearly 50 per cent; oils, motors, miscellaneous and steels sagged badly in trading values. The all-stocks was off by only 9 per cent in tradings.

London stock prices last week held steady at 99.6, after gaining 7.1 per cent since March 7. Berlin prices gained 0.22 per cent, after 1 per cent loss the preceding week. But Paris stocks lost 2.84 per cent as compared with the preceding week, following a four-week gain of 7.4 per cent.

The index of 225 industrial common stocks shows what a substantially representative $100 worth of stocks in 1926 would now amount to if held unchanged since that year. This index is weighted by shares outstanding. The index of "50 most active," or market leaders, shows the result of reinvesting the $100 every week in the market favorites of that week. This index is weighted by shares traded, the list changing weekly. The last column of the table gives the average yield per cent on these weeks' 50 leaders at current prices.

Graded Groups Sag.

Profit-taking was general throughout the graded groups of stocks last week, with the speculative groups naturally taking the largest loss, sagging from a high of 134.4 on April 10 to 131.9, down 1.9 per cent.

The semiinvestment group moved from its high of 137.4 April 10, to 135.5, losing 1.4 per cent.

The investment group, which showed no change in trend last week, lost 0.7 per cent from the high on April 11, from 204.7 to 203.2 on April 17.

All groups gained slightly late in Thursday's market.

World War Depreciated Dollar.

The depreciation of gold in terms of buying power in commodities, caused by the gold inflation in America and elsewhere in the World War, was far greater than had ever occurred before from any other cause. The dollar in 1919 would buy only half as much as in 1913.

More People Makes Them Poorer.

An increase in population will tend to increase aggregate wealth, but less rapidly than its own rate. That is, the increase in population tends to decrease per capita wealth.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, April 20 (A.P.).—New municipal financing scheduled for this week aggregated just under $25,000,000, compared with the weekly average for the year to date of $57,457,000. The largest issue is a $4,152,000 loan for Erie County, N. Y., which includes the City of Buffalo.

The American Utilities and General Corporation, an investment trust, announces it will acquire a substantial interest in Missouri Valley Gas Co., which arranged last week to supply a group of utility companies, headed by the United Light & Power Co., with gas for a new distributing system in the Middle West. American Utilities & General recently acquired a substantial block of United Light stock.

F. R. Henderson Corporation, member of the Rubber Exchange of New York, in its weekly survey of the crude rubber market, states that the latest reports from Akron indicate an increasing rate of tire production, and it is believed the market will continue to display a steady tone.

A new issue of 50,000 shares of class A common stock of the Huttig Manufacturing Co., of Chicago and Muscatine, Iowa, makers of veneered doors, woodwork and building materials, will shortly be made by Keane & Co. The proceeds will be used for the retirement of certain funded debt, and to provide working capital.

General Foods Corporation reports first quarter net profit of $5,990,764, equivalent to $1.13 a share. The company, formerly known as Postum, earned $5,168,384, or $1.10 a share, in the first three months of 1929. Colby M. Chester, president, said the per cent of net profits to sales for the period was 18.4 per cent as against 16.1 per cent for the corresponding three months last year.

COMMODITY PRICE LEVEL AGAIN LOWER

Copper Is Leading Factor in Decline of Index for the Week.

FARM PRODUCTS GO UP

After two weeks of good behavior, the wholesale commodity price index last week dropped back again by 0.66 per cent to a mark of 90.7. This is 0.3 points above the record low of March 28, when it stood at 90.4.

The fall in price of copper, a heavily weighted item, made itself felt in the all-commodity index declinc. Raw materials and finished goods, hitherto the weak branches, held up well. Cotton and beef also lost considerably.

As a result of the fall, the purchasing power of the dollar rose again to 110.3, a departure of 10.3 cents over the 1926 level.

Coppers Cause Index Drop.

The long-expected fall in the price of copper last week had pronounced effect on the commodity price level index. The fall from 17.8 cents a pound to 14 cents caused drops of 4.44 per cent in the semimanufactured goods division, and 3.92 per cent in the metals group.

The decline in coppers was similar to that of last year. On April 5, 1929, the price of copper was 23.5 cents per pound, and, dropping to 19.2 cents on April 12, caused the semimanufactured and metals indexes to fall off 4.6 per cent and 4.2 per cent, respectively.

Continue Strong in Tone.

Raw materials and finished goods, which were the chief causes for the long commodity decline that had been stopped the preceding two weeks, continued strong, in spite of the fact that there were twice as many individual item falls as rises in the raw materials division which receded somewhat, while finished goods made no loss. The foods group showed good strength.

The satisfactory action of foods and farm products, in the face of the general commodity drop caused a further rise in the purchasing power of farm products, the index going up 0.46 per cent to 108.9.

LOCAL RAINS SMALL AID IN SOUTHWEST

Winter Wheat Being Badly Damaged by Drought in Area.

COTTON PLANTING AIDED

Winter wheat has been badly damaged by drought in the Southwestern area, and local rains there did little to relieve that part of the belt last week. Rains in the Northwest, however, were generally beneficial. Precipitation has been below requirements in the Ohio Valley and Missouri. Spring wheat seeding is ahead of normal, great progress and good results are noted in South Dakota, and planting is almost finished in Minnesota, which wants rainfall.

Again dryness in the Southwest impeded corn planting, and germination is unsatisfactory there. While rain is needed throughout the belt, seeding has gone forward in the Mississippi Valley.

Last week's weather was conducive to cotton planting, and it went forward rapidly. Germination in earlier planted areas is slow, however.

Stability Makes Ideal Commodity Price Level

The theoretically ideal commodity price level is one which does not deviate either up or down, thus holding the price of goods and its reciprocal, the purchasing power of dollar, at about the same point. When a buyer contracts for a certain amount of product at a certain price to be delivered at a future date, and that price has risen by the time the delivery is made the buyer benefits and the seller loses. If the price has gone down the seller would have gained.

The smaller the fluctuation in either direction, the more stabilized business becomes.

Saving the Pennies.

It requires only a small degree of saving or spending to lead to comparative wealth or poverty, even in one generation. As Micawber said, a man with an income of £1 a week will ultimately reach poverty if he spends just one penny more a week, and reach opulence if he spends just one penny less.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

MacAndrews & Forbes Co.

Miss M. H.—Can you give me any advice about the stock of the MacAndrews & Forbes Co.? On investigation, the company seems sound, yet the stock has consistently stayed down. Also, would Jenkins Television be considered a speculation at this time or an investmen for long-term holding?

Answer—MacAndrews & Forbes reported for year ended December 31, 1929, net income equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $3.24 a common share, a slight increase over the $2.90 a share earned for 1928, and substantially in excess of the $2.60 now being paid yearly on that issue. Earnings in recent years have been relatively stable. Company has a well-entrenched position in licorice and rug industry and has shown ability for conducting other lines on a profitable basis. In addition to the cash dividends, company paid 25 cents extra in 1929 and a like amount on January 15, 1930. In view of these facts, there appears no good reason why the stock should continue to show a declining tendency.

Considering seemingly bright outlook for television, stock of the Jenkins Television Co. appears to possess a good deal of long-pull speculative attractiveness. However, it is not to be regarded as an investment in its present status, as it is not on a dividend paying basis.

General Baking and Others.

P. E. B.—Please advise me on either the speculative or investment value of General Baking common and preferred, Pathe Exchange common and "A" stock; also United Cigar Stores and Reynolds Spring?

Answer—General Baking preferred alone of this group has any investment value whatever, as it is the only issue at present on a dividend paying basis. Even that has lately had its dividend cut in half, from $6 to $3 yearly, that is on the $6 preferred issue. United Cigar Stores passed the 25 cent quarterly dividend due in January. As this, as well as General Baking common, Reynolds Spring and Pathe issues are nondividend payers, they are not to be included in the investment class. They are pure speculations, and somewhat uncertain ones at that.

Symington "A."

V. R.—I would appreciate it if you will inform me relative to Symington "A" stock.

Answer—Symington "A" is a $2 cumulative issue on which there are arrears of $6.50 per share. While dividend requirements have been covered, earnings for the last five years averaging $2.14 a share, the management omitted dividends after paying 50 cents in 1927. Past earnings, instead of being paid out as dividends have been used to retire $1,000,000 of notes There is no liability now ahead of the 200,000 Class "A" shares except current liabilities, which on December 31 last totaled $369,077, against current assets of $2,631,996.

Earnings last year, including a reserve of $421,220, which subsidiary debt was made good to Symington a few months ago, were equal to $3.63 per Class A share. Symington did a good first quarter business this year as the result of large orders received late in 1929. The stock may be regarded as a speculation with some attractiveness.

In making inquiries address Charles W. Storm, financial department of The Washington Post, and inclose a self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Bond Market Dull, But Retains Gains

Half of Recent Pronounced Increase Is Saved as Trading Declines.

By H. B. BROUGHAM
(Irving Fisher Service).

One of the temporary setbacks and dullnesses which the bond market has experienced in its upward climb this year was in evidence last week. The decline was 0.24 per cent, bringing the Fisher index to 100.08 on the basis of 100 for 1926. The record 1929-30 high of 101.6 was made for the week ended March 21, since which time bond prices have sagged slightly, losing half of the recent rise.

Value of tradings in bonds fell off last week by 3.6 per cent, as compared with 2 per cent for the preceding week. But foreign government bonds held, and trading in utility bonds Wednesday made the record for 1930 in this group. Of the 70 bonds in the Fisher selection, 51 per cent fell at the close of the week, as compared with the preceding week's close, while 19 per cent were up and 30 per cent showed no change. The weakness in bond prices was general throughout the groups, responding to the unusual expansion of issues.

NATS RALLY TO WIN THRILLER FROM YANKEES, 6-3

Pegler

NEW YORK, April 20.—The West Point football establishment will be made up largely of unidentified men this year. The statute of limitations has run against Capt. Biff Jones, the head coach, and Chris Cagle, Johnny Murrell and Buster Perry, of the Varsity, and now Frank Wandle, the trainer, has slid his resignation under the General's door and run off.

Mr. Wandle may need some introduction by name, although there are those who know him, scattered all over the world by now, for he has coached and trained seven classes of officers at West Point, and before that served as recreation officer of the First Corps Area. But by sight, he is familiar to all the crowds that have watched the Army team play ball in the polo grounds, the Yankee Stadium, the Yale Bowl, the Harvard Stadium and several other arenas hither and yon to the number of several million.

He is the big, solid party in the fur-lined canvas coat who heaves up from his place alotng the row where the Army coaches sit brooding, as is the habit of football coaches, and goes trotting out on the football field with his little black bag in hand and his little black baseball cap pulled over his bristly gray head when an Army player is hurt. Up at West Point they say that Frankie Wandle can tell whether a man is out before he hits the ground.

Wandle Knows His Knockouts.

Some times when a man goes down with unusual emphasis on the frozen sward some coach interrupts his brooding to look down the row to Frank. "No; he's all right; he'll be up," Mr. Wandle will say. But other times, Mr. Wandle is on his feet and on his way with his scissors and saws and soldering irons jingling in the small black satchel to whittle and tinker and patch the victim before the victim himself knows he won't be able to come up.

I can't quite get the right of Mr. Wandle's reason for resigning his job. He is socially and professionally cordial with Maj. Ralph Sasse, the Cavalry officer who is about to start his career as head coach, relieving Capt. Jones. He gets along well with the generals, who come and go, and the cadets of the corps have a special regard for him because he is one of the very few people on the post who needn't be saluted in a brisk, military manner.

Perhaps he could have insisted on that for he holds a commission as major of the Reserve, but Frank waived all such consideration when he took over the job in the fall of 1923, to amass the most terrifying collection of electric chairs, electric beds, electric tweezers and such-like apparatus that this world has ever known, in his repair shop for limping athletes in the locker room, off the gymnasium.

Thinks About Retiring To North.

Mr. Wandle states that he is thinking of retiring to his tract of 1,800 acres in some Canadian woods north of Ottawa, but I can't picture him living on berries and moss and lake water way up yonder when there are football games going on in the autumn. He has been proceeding to Canada in the summer time for several seasons now, generally accompanied by a dozen cadets on furlough, but in the fall he has always emerged from the deep-tangled wildwood with his detachment and reported back to West Point.

The woods north of Ottawa is no place for an athletic trainer in the fall when the A, B, C and D squads there are whirling out of their huddles and slapping together in scrimmage on the football fields, and I have a notion Mr. Wandle will be jogging out with his little black bag somewhere when October comes again.

Capt. Wells, the Army publicity officer, is getting up a big piece about Frank for release to the papers some days after the news is off the story. They are curiously shy about news pieces at the Military Academy, generally preferring to wait until a given proposition has been thoroughly rumored around the country before coming out, breathless, with the story. I suppose Army officers, especially on a dress parade post such as the Point, are afraid of what some representative will think, if representatives think.

Only Two Cadets Seriously Injured.

At any rate, Capt. Wells is planning to write himself something in the way of a testimonial for Frankie Wandle, telling all about his inventions and preventions in his seven years of training the West Point athletes, not only in football season, but all the way around the calendar. He is going to describe some of the head

Mangin Bows To Doeg at Pinehurst

G. U. Star, Slowed by Injuries, Beaten by 6—0, 6—1, 6—3.

Miss Anderson Wins Women's Title at Richmond.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 20 (A.P.).—John Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif., today won the men's singles title in the United North and South tennis tournament, defeating Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., in the finals match, 6—0, 6—1.

The left-handed Californian, third in national ranking, appeared to be at the top of his game while Mangin was decidedly off form.

Swollen Ankle Bothers Mangin.

Early in the contest it was apparent that the Jersey star was in for a decisive beating. An ankle, badly swollen after a sprain, and a blistered heel bothered Mangin to such an extent that he failed to go after some apparently easy gets.

Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., and John Van Ryn, of Orange, N. J., defeated Doeg and George Lott, of Chicago, to win the men's doubles title. The score of the match was 8—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Van Ryn and Allison won from Mangin and Berkley Bell, of Austin, Tex., this morning, 7—9, 6—3, 6—3, 7—5, in the semifinals.

Penelope Anderson Gains Title.

Richmond, Va., April 20 (A.P.).—Miss Penelope Anderson, of Richmond, today won the women's singles championship of the annual North and South tennis tournament by defeating Mrs. Marian Jessup, of Wilmington, Del., 6—3, 1—6, 6—3.

The Richmond girl, playing on her home courts at the Country Club of Virginia, was in fine form, and her accurate and well-placed returns were frequently out of the reach of her opponent. The match was transferred here from Pinehurst in order that Miss Anderson might fill a previously made engagement.

Tilden Adds Two More Riviera Tennis Titles

Beaulieu, France, April 20 (A.P.).—Big Bill Tilden added two more Riviera tennis championships to his already long collection today.

With Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian, now living in England, Tilden won the mixed doubles title, defeating Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., and Wilbur Coen, of Kansas City, 6—1, 6—3. In the men's doubles, Tilden and Coen defeated Lesieur and Magaloff, of France, 6—3, 6—3, 7—5.

In the women's doubles, Miss Ryan and Miss Jacobs defeated Mrs. Satterthwaite, of England, and Mlle. Sigart, of Belgium, 7—5, 5—7, 6—4.

Coen announced that he would not be able to play against Tilden in the singles finals tomorrow because of a leg injury.

North-South Target Tourney Opens Today

Pinehurst, N. C., April 20 (A.P.).—The twelfth annual North and South target tournament and the North Carolina State target tournament, a combined meet, will start tomorrow at the Pinehurst Gun Club with the introductory shoot of 100 birds at 16 yards as the first event.

More than 60 marksmen are entered. D. H. McCullough, of Charlotte, is the defending North and South titleholder. C. A. Chandler, of Atlanta, who won the handicap and doubles last year, is also entered.

Other nationally prominent marksmen entered include D. T. Leahy, of New York; R. G. Coffey, of Prairie City, Iowa; C. C. Allen and J. T. Wilson, both of Kenosha, Wis.; W. H. Miller, of Cleveland, and William E. Beers, of New Britain, Conn.

Hadley Faces Athletics Today

Sam Jones Is Back in Good Graces of Manager.

Powell Stars After Being Benched by Chattanooga.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

THE Nationals return to Philadelphia this morning where they complete the series of last week, with Irving Hadley slated to do the Washington pitching. Then Manager Walter Johnson brings his men back home for a stay which brings every team in the circuit here. It is during this long stand that the Nat leader hopes to sharpen the batting eyes of his men, who have had little opportunity to do much hitting since the season started.

A flock of young amateur and semipro pitchers have been rounded up to help out the regular members of the staff and, with morning practices scheduled daily, it will be a case of batting and then more batting for the Nats.

Tony Lazzeri's single in the second inning yesterday was his first of the season. Previously, he had come to the bat 14 times and the only time he had seen base-life was due to a pass.

Brown fanned Babe Ruth, ending the first frame yesterday and Gehrig starting the second, much to the delight of the large crowd.

Sam Jones Back In Fold.

Pitcher "Sad Sam" Jones is back in good standing with the club. Manager Johnson stated yesterday the argument between the two, which led to the pitcher being sent back here from Boston, had been already forgotten by him.

Catcher Roy Spencer goes on a pay status today. He failed to accept salary terms offered by the club until the day the season opened and, under baseball rules, was forced to get himself into playing condition at his own expense. He had been working out, however, at his wife's home at Atlanta before reporting and put on the finishing touches while the Nats were at Boston and Philadelphia last week.

Myer made a fine back-handed stop of Ruth's hot one back of second in the third frame but was unable to turn in time to throw out the Bambino at first.

The Yankees showed two new faces in their line-up, Sammy Byrd cavorting in left and Ben Chapman holding down the third sack. With Byrd and Goslin both on the job, our feathered friends were well represented.

Marberry Slightly Injured.

Pitcher Fred Marberry, of the Nationals, slightly injured the thumb on his right hand while tossing to batters before yesterday's game. He will be ready when needed, however, as he is not scheduled to pitch until tomorrow or Wednesday.

Bluege robbed Ruth of a hit in the sixth when he raced over toward short for a hard-hit bounder. While he had no chance to get the Babe at first, a quick underhanded toss to Cronin forced out Koenig at second.

In addition to Hadley, only three other pitchers will be taken to Philadelphia for this afternoon's game, Garland Braxton, Bob Burke and Ad (Snookie) Liska.

Jake Powell, the Takoma Tiger Bearcat whom the Nats sent to Chattanooga, struck out three times in the opening game. After doing bench duty the next two days, he was given another chance. That he took advantage of it is indicated in the telegram which Joe Engel sent President Clark Griffith Saturday night, which said that Powell starred both at bat and in the field and practically single-handed beat the Atlanta Club for the Lookouts' fourth straigth victory over the Crackers.

BROWN GAME'S HERO; 25,000 SEE END OF ZACHARY'S STREAK

Young Southpaw Scatters 8 Hits, Aids Offensively.

Rice, Goslin, Bluege Contribute Blows in Pinches.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

FLASHING a sample of the brand of ball which they displayed during the exhibition season, the Nationals yesterday showed an enthusiastic crowd of 25,000 fans that, behind good pitching, they are capable of giving any team in the league a run for its money. And Lloyd Brown was on hand to furnish this pitching yesterday, the result being a 6-to-3 victory over the Yankees and a jump into second place in the league standing.

The game was a thriller throughout, with the Nationals twice coming from behind, once going into the van, then losing their advantage, and finally rallying to gain and hold what proved their winning margin by a three-run stand in the eighth session.

Brown not only pitched like a veteran, allowing but eight hits, which were fairly well scattered, while walking but two and fanning four, including Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, but he also cracked out two hits on his own account and fielded flashily. All in all it was a Brown day, especially for the Yankees.

"Ole Tom" Zachary started on the hill for the Yankees, and why he was not allowed to finish is one of those things which never will be explained. In the eighth, with the Yankees trailing by a run, Cronin coaxed a pass and Judge laid down a neat sacrifice. Zachary had allowed but six hits previously and apparently was in no trouble, but at this stage Manager Bob Shawkey evidently consulted a soothsayer, who advised a pitching change.

Yanking Zachary Poor Move.

The advice was not sound, however, for Bluege immediately greeted Gordon (Dusty) Rhodes, who relieved Zachary, with a single which knotted the string and, following a wild pitch to Ruel, with the count one and one on him, Roy Sherid was rushed to the hill.

He finished what Rhodes had started, walking Ruel and then the Nats proceeded to pack away the verdict. Brown, next up, rolled to Koenig, who appeared to have a sure double-play in sight. The Yankee shortstop, however, tried to do the impossible—throw the ball before he got it—the result being filled bases. Barnes hitting for Loepp, forced Bluege at the plate, but Rice came through with a liner-single to left which sent both Ruel and Brown home, the latter gaining the decision at the plate by a whisker. This put the Nats three runs to the good and, despite the fact that two pinch-hitters were used by the Yanks, Brown saw to it that no alien damage was done.

The Yankees' defeat was charged to Zachary, bringing to an end a record of 13 consecutive victories, for the veteran southpaw, who started his professional career here, had a world's series triumph in 1926 and unbroken string of 12 triumphs last season.

Previously, it had been a ding-dong affair, with the Yankees breaking the ice in the second canto. They knicked Brown's slants for three hits in a row in this frame, Lazzeri, Byrd and Chapman coming through. In the third, the score was tied when Goslin doubled, Myer singled, and Cronin came through with a long sacrifice fly.

Nationals Jump Into Van in Seventh.

The next scoring was done in the sixth, the Yankees again becoming one up as a result of Koenig's single, a force-play, Gehrig's one-shot and Lazzeri's infield out. Instead of just equalizing this time, Johnson's team went into the lead for the first time, scoring a brace of counters in the "lucky" frame. With one dead, Brown singled and all hands were safe when Zachary pegged badly trying to make a force-play of Loepp's roller.

Brown carried on to third on the overthrow and it looked as though this opportunity would be passed up when the pitcher was forced at the plate on Rice's tap. Goslin, however, had on his batting clothes and he

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

The athletic program for the Episcopal High School will fill up this week when both the track team and the baseball team will be in action on three days. The track team will meet Eastern High Shool this afternoon, Western High on Friday afternoon and on Saturday the team will go to Philadelphia to enter the Penn Relays. Episcopal's first real test will be against Eastern today.

Coach Callaway's baseball team will play Tech High School from Washington tomorrow afternoon, Gonzaga on Wednesday and Fishburne Military Academy on Saturday afternoon. All three baseball games will be played on Hoxton Field. The Tech game was scheduled to have been played last Wednesday, but due to rain the game was postponed until this week.

The interclass track meet scheduled at the Alexandria High School for last week will be held Thursday afternoon. Coach Reynolds will use the same officials and hopes to have everything run off in excellent shape.

Bottles West, former Alexandria High School star baseball player, was elected captain of the Yankee Baseball Team at a meeting of the team held last week. Kenneth Mumford was named manager and is busy arranging games to be played on Haydon Field. Earl Cronin, former star of the St. Mary's Celtics, has been selected to coach the club.

Players signed for the coming season are Lyons, Sinclair, Boran, Mumford, Lucas, Gorman, West, Vogt, Bruin, Gemsmere, Wheatly and Carr.

The St. Mary's Celtics Basket Ball Team for the past season will be tendered a banquet tomorrow night by Albert Hurshman, popular Alexandria sportsman. The entire team of ten players will attend the banquet, along with Coach Pettitt, Manager Robert McDonald and Director Corbett.

Charlie Armstrong, Alexandria boy, is one of the stars of the Hargrave Military Academy Track Team. He won two first places in a recent meet, when his team won by a large margin.

Alexandria High School Baseball Team will play two games on foreign fields this week both being Third District games. The game postponed last Friday with the Washington and Lee High School will be played tomorrow afternoon at Ballston, Va., on the Washington and Lee High School field. On Friday afternoon, the local lads will travel to Fredericksburg to play the high school from that city in their second championship game.

TIGERS BOW TO INDIANS, 2 TO 0

Hudlin and Burnett Are Heroes; Pinch Double Decides.

DETROIT, April 20 (A.P.).—Willis Hudlin blanked the Detroit Tigers here today, while a Cleveland pinch batsman drove in the runs which won the game, 2 to 0.

Detroit threatened several times, but Hudlin was master of the situation on these occasions.

Burnett batted for Goldman in the seventh after Falk, Hodapp and Luke Sewell had singled and drove out a two-bagger, scoring Falk and Hodapp.

Berger's Hitting Gives Braves 7-to-2 Victory

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 20 (A.P.).—Walter Berger's hard hitting gave the Braves the deciding spark to make it two straight over Brooklyn this afternoon by the score of 7 to 2. His home run with the bases filled in the seventh climaxed a six-run rally. Two errors by Walter Gilbert paved the way for Watson Clark's downfall in that frame.

Selbold went the route for Boston and kept Brooklyn's nine hits judiciously scattered. A capacity crowd of 30,000 witnessed the game.

Cubs Defeat Reds, 4-3; Blake Is Effective

Cincinnati, April 20 (A.P.).—The Reds failed to make good on two opportunities to score additional runs and the Cubs won the second game of the series, 4 to 3, making it all even.

Blake, who went the route for the Cubs on the mound, was wild throughout, but was effective in the pinches with the exception of the fourth inning, when the Reds counted three times.

RED SOX 5-3 VICTIMS OF MACKMEN

25,000 See Athletics Rally in 7th to Earn Verdcit.

BOSTON, April 20 (A.P.).—The Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 3, before 25,000 persons at Braves Field here today, coming from behind with a three-run rally in the seventh inning, which proved the deciding factor of the game.

In this inning the Athletics bunched five of their ten hits off Danny MacFayden, who went the distance for Boston.

While Summons failed to fatten his unusually large early season home-run record, his double in the first inning drove in one run and a sacrifice fly in the seventh added another. Rommel and Quinn pitched for the Athletics.

FLYING HEELS MAY BE MADE FAVORITE FOR DERBY

Cochran Ace Has Great Record

Won 7 of 10 Starts as 2-Year-Old for $79,460.

Lack of Size Is Only Fault of Son of Flying Ebony.

Special to The Washington Post.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 20.—Although a preponderance of opinion throughout the Nation seems to have placed Gallant Fox upon the pedestal of favoritism for the $50,000 added Kentucky Derby, to a man-up-a-tree it is difficult to see how at this time any candidate can be rated above Gifford A. Cochran's Flying Heels.

Early spring racing may give some other thoroughbred an indisputable claim, but on the basis of 2-year-old racing the son of Flying Ebony seems to be the "solid horse" for the big event to be decided at Churchill Downs on Saturday afternoon, May 17.

Gallant Fox unquestionably was a high-class juvenile, but his record hardly matched that of Flying Heels. The latter last year won a total of $79,460. In ten starts he was first seven times and second the other three. That would be a brilliant record in any kind of company, and Flying Heels didn't pick his competition. He faced everything that came his way.

Flying Heels Has Great Record.

Flying Heels won the Nursery Handicap at Belmont Park, the Pimlico Futurity, the Remsen Handicap at Jamaica and the Tia Juana Futurity. He was second in the Baldwin Handicap at Jamaica, the Grab Bag Handicap at Saratoga and the Wakefield Handicap at Empire City.

The only complaint heard about Flying Heels is that he is a small horse, and that fact probably accounts for his failure to be made favorite for the Kentucky Derby. But there have been many small horses to achieve leading rank on the turf. Flying Heels' sire, Flying Ebony, was a small horse, and, while he was not ranked among the greatest of all time, he was good enough to win the 1925 Kentucky Derby.

Flying Heels is the type of horse referred to as "tough." He is the kind that matures quickly and he will be showing his top 3-year-old form before some of his rivals have rounded to. He was an iron-horse among 2-year-olds last year for his campaign began during the winter at Tia Juana and he was in just as fine fettle when he was retired last fall.

Flying Ebony Colt Out of Heel Taps.

Flying Heels is a brown colt by Flying Ebony out of Heeltaps. Flying Ebony was by The Finn from Princess Mary, a Hessian mare out of Royal Gun by Royal Hampton. Princess Mary's second dam was Spring Gun by Springfield. Heeltaps was by Ultimus and out of Queen of the Water, a mare by Waterboy out of Planutess by Planudes. Heeltaps' second dam was Countess Wanda by Loyalist, a son of Sterling.

Flying Heels has been turning in clever trials during his spring preparation and is reported to be as good as hands can make him. Until he shows in actual competition some shortcoming, it will be hard to place him second to any in a consideration of candidates for the Kentucky Derby.

—Havre De Grace Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 20. Under a warm sun, the Havre de Grace track was drying rapidly today, and it is believed the going will be "good" or not worse than "slow" for the running of tomorrow's program.

The feature attraction here tomorrow will be the 6-furlong Lansdown Purse for 3-year-olds exclusively. The Lansdown will be run as the third number, and nine are scheduled to start. One Preakness and Derby candidate is in the race. This is Mrs. J. Simpson Dean's SKID.

The "Dixiana's" MUCKER, undefeated in two starts sine the Maryland spring season opened, is taken to win the Lansdown. This well-bred son of Sweep and Valley of the Moon defeated better 3-year-olds than he meets in the Lansdown, last Thursday. He will be the top-weight tomorrow under 116 pounds.

TOPKICK, which finished far back in his first start of the year a few days ago, may show sudden improvement. This fellow is partial to soft going. CHATTERING is an exceptionally good mudder. In fact, she only wins over bad tracks. She has won two straight, but she hasn't been beating the kind she will meet tomorrow. SKID, if he runs his race, should hold the balance of the field safe.

The remainder of tomorrow's card, with the exception of the initial number, which is for 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland, is made up of claiming events.

FIRST RACE—SPIRIT RIVER, which races for Al G. Weston, was highly touted the first time he started at Bowie. He raced greenly and finished far back. Maybe he is better than that effort suggests. ABITIBI is another which was well-fancied in her initial start. He had tough luck at the break. TUCKAHOE may be best of the three Sylvester Labrot has entered in this event, which is for 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland. LIGHTNING GIRL has never started, but she is in the hands of a capable trainer.

SECOND RACE—STUPENDOUS has never been in a cheaper race than the second. She's a very good mudder, and, unless she is all shot, she should be able to outstep her field. MALOLO won with plenty to spare last Tuesday. He has never run over a bad track. DREANA LEE beat a cheap field very handily last Thursday. She is partial to soft going. SUNVIEW may surprise by finishing close up. He failed to run his race last out at Bowie.

THIRD RACE—MUCKER is meeting the same kind here that he has been beating. We expect him to make it three straight. He is an extremely well-bred colt and one that will likely improve with racing. TOPKICK failed to show any speed last Tuesday. He has trained well, and we believe he can do better. He will be well suited in the going. CHATTERING improves just about 50 per cent in mud. There's no telling how good she is over a deep track, but she's stepping up a bit in company. SKID raced fairly well the other day.

FOURTH RACE—There is a chance that MASTER STAR might upset the dope in the fourth. He's a maiden, but much better than generally rated. He's been racing with better 3-year-olds than he will meet in this contest. NAYLOR has been a hot tip since the Maryland season opened. He failed his many admirers at Bowie, but he ran a fairly good race. CALOME might have been lucky to beat Naylor at Bowie. MACIL is a good mudder. If he can go a route he has a good chance in this race.

FIFTH RACE—EASTER appears to be the class of the 3-year-old platers that will meet in the fifth. The Sir Gallahad filly was beaten by Chattering in a mile and 70 yards dash last Wednesday. She isn't meeting Chattering this time. FRANCES ST. L. also beat Easter in the same race. Frances had all the luck in the race, while Easter suffered interference going to the first turn. FRANCES ST. L. has only to repeat her last effort to hold STAR safe.

SIXTH RACE—If the going is still soft by the time the sixth is run, FIRE OPAL will be hard to beat. He loves the mud, and the fact he won his last start, beating the same kind he meets here, is evidence that he is fit. MAINSHEET is just a cheap horse, but he's honest. He's usually close up regardless of track conditions. HIGH LIFE couldn't beat a cheap horse like Realtor in heavy going last Thursday. He would have to do much better than that to beat the first two named. MOUNTAIN GRASS is fast, but she stops. Fourth is the best we can give her.

SEVENTH RACE — CUDGELLER went in good form when he won the sixth number last Monday. He beat a better field than he meets tomorrow. If he can run in the going, he'll be hard to beat. BOYISH BOB seems to have rounded to her best form. She prefers it soft under foot. ERA is taken to hold REALTOR safe.

D. C. KICKERS IN SOCCER VICTORY

Defeat Gaelics, 1-0; British Forfeit to Marlboro.

MARLBORO yesterday gained The Washington Post Cup, emblematice of Washington and Southeastern District Soccer Association championship by the simple process of lining up on the field and kicking the ball through the goal on the signal of Referee Ben Kail.

The Maryland kickers were scheduled to meet British United in the replay of a protested game, but the United booters, who won the protested match, 1 to 0, refused to place its team on the field, having appealed the decision of the association.

The Capital City League season came to a close following the Marlboro "victory" when D. C. kickers rounded out its most successful season with a 3-to-0 victory over Gaelic-Americans. Bennetz and Miller did the goal scoring, the former counting twice and the latter once.

80,000 See Very Well Win in French Stake

Auteuil, France, April 20 (A.P.).—Eighty thousand spectators today saw Very Well, 8-year-old son of Fribourg, out of Verroerie, capture the Doumergue Stake, a steeple chase handicap, named in honor of the president of the French republic, today. The winner comes from the rather modest stable of Beauvois, and paid 13 to 1 in the betting.

Very Well won by three-quarters of a length in a great drive from the favorite, Strelitz, with Suroit third, three lengths farther back. Nineteen horses started on the jaunt of 2 miles and 7 furlongs. The race carried a value of $10,000.

President Doumergue and most of the diplomatic corps attended the first great gala racing day. The day also marked the first great styles display of the year. Skirts, for the most part, were long, reaching about midway between the knee and the ankle.

Central High Nine Given Fine Chance to Win Flag

Young Team Shows Class With Pitching Department Weakest Link; Harrison and Deveau Playing Fine Games on Infield.

By WILLIAM F. DISMER.

CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL baseball fans need have no worry about their team this year. While it is always bad policy, both for the predicter and the predictee, to anticipate a successful season, it invariably being the fate of the team so named to immediately start on the downward path, here is one writer who is willing to wager that the present Blue and White nine will win more than its share of games this season, and who will not be at all surprised should it cop the interhigh championship for the first time since 1926.

Not only on the record of the Central Team, which shows three victories in as many starts, is this forecast made, but the manner in which the Blue and White lads have played illustrates that they have ability above the average, coupled with the possession of some of the fine points of the game which are bound to aid them in their battles.

The Central Team possesses no abundance of veterans, for with the exception of two, one the eventual entrance of whom into the game is doubted as the result of an injury, none of the nine regulars now playing have ever seen interhigh action before. Capt. George Brandt is still missing through his ineligibility and Frank Cumberland is out with a sorely wrenched shoulder.

Harrison Good Sub For Brandt.

However, the playing of Harrison at his leader's post at third, and the work of Deveau at second, have played no small part in the team's success and this pair is likely to prove extremely valuable to the squad through the year. Broadbent at first and Humphrey Millerat short round out an infield through which it has been extremely difficult to drive safe blows in the first three games.

With Thompson, Colella and Al Miller roaming the outer gardens in big-league style, many apparently safe hits already have been cut off with each of the outer trio coming through with fanciful catches, while their hitting has been in accord with the standards of their positions.

Kiernan and Waldenmaier were shaping up as the two first-string catchers of the club until Saturday, when Dick Cooke came through with such a bang-up performance behind the bat that the club can now boast just about the best catching staff in the schools. All three possess strong arms and can hit 'em out with the heaviest sluggers of the team. All of which leaves it up to the pitching corps, and, as has been exemplified in the three triumphs, a dearth of talent is being uncovered in this department.

Cooke Shows Reversal Of Box Form.

In the first two games, each opponent was blanked for the first six innings and only two six-run innings have marred the work of the Blue and White moundsmen. Twice upon entering the game has Dick Cooke been unable to get his bearings until the opposing club has knocked him for six tallies, but with this reversal of form Saturday after the shaky start, he too, looked ready to do his part.

Central runners have also shown that they are not lost on the bases and on three occasions so far, a runner has, by heads-up playing, scored from first on a single, while several times they have gone from first to third on an infield out.

One thing stands as an ill-omen to the team. Should it continue its winning before the interhigh series, overconfidence may play havoc with the nine now at the top of its game.

District Colleges Face Biggest Week of Season

17 Contests in Baseball, Tennis, Lacrosse and Track Scheduled; Georgetown-New York U. Nines Will Clash Today.

THE Georgetown-New York University baseball game today at Washington Barracks opens the biggest week of collegiate sports here to date this spring. Seventeen contests in baseball, tennis, lacrosse and track compose the banner program which lists action for every day except Tuesday.

Today's baseball clash, which commences at 3 o'clock, one-half hour ahead of Georgetown's usual starting hour, should prove interesting, to say the least.

Georgetown is out to score its eleventh straight victory, and, opposing, as it does, an old rival, has an added incentive to win.

Coach Red Smith has all of his four regular hurlers in shape, but is likely to give the starting assignment to Harry "Lightfoot" Noznesky, burly sophomore left-hander, who is credited with three victories and no defeats. Noznesky hasn't worked since April 4, when the Hoyas downed Cornell, 9 to 3.

COLLEGIATE SPORTS PROGRAM FOR WEEK

Baseball—Georgetown vs. West Virginia University, at Washington Barracks.

Baseball—Gallaudet vs. Shepherd, at Kendall Green.

Baseball—Maryland vs. Army, at College Park.

Lacrosse—Maryland vs. Army, at College Park.

Tennis—Maryland vs. Washington and Lee, at College Park.

Track—Georgetown, Catholic, Maryland, at Pennsylvania relays, Philadelphia.

New York U. Boasts Strong Nine.

New York University this season boasts another strong nine, despite the loss of its 1929 batting star, Ken Strong, whose home run with the bases loaded turned an apparent Georgetown triumph into a defeat here last year. Last week the Violets met the United States Marines at Quantico in two games, winning one and losing one by close scores.

Georgetown's schedule for the remainder of the week includes baseball games with Princeton, Boston College and West Virginia at Washington Barracks, and the Pennsylvania relays at Philadelphia. The diamond tilts will be staged on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Maryland, Catholic U. and Gallaudet Teams also will figure prominently on the week's program.

While Maryland will figure in two varsity and a pair of freshman events prior to Saturday, the Old Liners are looking forward to the battles that day with West Point's baseball and lacrosse combinations at College Park.

Maryland Diamonders Doing Well.

Coach Shipley's ball team is going well, having won four games, lost two and tied one, and is second in the race in the Tri-State League of Southern Conference teams with three triumphs against one reverse. V. M. I.'s unbeaten nine is setting the pace with a trio of wins in as many starts.

Coach Jack Faber, of the lacrosse team, was rather nervous in the first half Saturday when the fighting Bulldogs from Georgia held his charges to a 3-to-1 score, but he felt better in the last 30 minutes when the Old Liners' attack got to functioning and chalked up eleven goals.

Georgia showed the fastest and most aggressive defense the Maryland Team has faced this year, and presented a good bunch of stick handlers, but was weak on clearing out the ball and did not have a smooth offense. The Bulldogs played the Navy style of game of checking all over the field and long passes goalward on attack.

A pleasing feature of the game from a Maryland standpoint was the "coming to life" of Fred Stieber, out home, in the second half, and good passing of the attack in "feeding" each other, as illustrated in the fact that nine men figured in counting of the Old Liners' fourteen markers.

Catholic U. Preps for Eagles Thursday.

Catholic's Baseball Team, which has won four games in six starts, losing one and tying one in the other pair, will resume action on Thursday in a game with Boston College, one of strongest nines in the East. Lou Hurley, twice a winner in three games to date, probably will hurl against the Eagles. On Saturday, Catholic will engage Manhattan. Both contests will be played in the Brookland Stadium.

Gallaudet, holding two victories in three games, will meet the Tank School Team on Wednesday at Fort Leonard Wood, Md. The soldier outfit administered Gallaudet's single defeat on April 9 by a 10-to-2 score. Shepherd College, an old Gallaudet rival, will be the Blues' opponent on Saturday at Kendall Green.

George Washington's undefeated tennis team will also resume competition, being listed to oppose Washington and Lee's racqueters on Friday. The Edgemoor Club courts probably will be the scene of the match.

The Pennsylvania relays at Philadelphia on Friday and Saturday will draw representatives of Georgetown, Maryland and Catholic. Georgetown will enter four or five relay teams, in addition to six individuals, among whom are Leo Sexton, all-around star, and Clarion Cosh, decathlon performer, who finished fourth last year in the feature individual event of the carnival.

Local Runners Entered In Penn Relays.

Maryland will send a mile team into one of the several college relay races, and has been assigned the No. 2 position at the start. Competing against the Old Line four will be Depauw, which drew the pole; William and Mary, Bucknell, Union and Fordham.

The Catholic U. mile team has drawn the pole in its race with St. John's, of Brooklyn, Stevens, Johns Hopkins, Ohio U. and Bowdoin.

Georgetown fared poorly in the drawing for positions. The No. 2 position in the sprint medley relay is the best the Hilltop received. Last place in the starting line-up is Georgetown's assignment in the most important relay race of the carnival, the American championship one-mile race. Yale was given the pole in this event, with N. Y. U., Holy Cross, Cornell, Dartmouth, Syracuse, Penn State, Princeton, Penn, Indiana, Army, Western State Teachers, Chicago and Harvard following in the order named.

Georgetown was placed fourth in the two-mile relay, ninth in the half-mile and fifteenth in the quarter-mile.

NATS STOP YANKS AS BROWN STARS

answered the prayers of the fans by tripling off the right-field wall, almost getting the ball over. This cleared the bases and put the Nats on the front end of a 3-2 score.

The Yanks were not through yet, however, as they scored once and looked like they would do even better in the next frame. Combs opened with a scratch hit in front of the plate and advanced a base each on Koenig's suicide and Ruth's helpful out. Gehrig walked and Lazzeri came through with a double, the only extra-base blow credited to "Ruth & Co." Combs, of course, counted, but quick handling held Gehrig at third, where he died when Byrd rolled to Bluege.

It was here that the Nats rallied and, with the aid of "Lady Luck," put the game on ice and gave the New Yorkers their fourth successive defeat.

Goslin Comes to Life With Bat.

Aside from Brown's pitching, one of the bright spots of the game from a Washington standpoint was the signs which Goslin showed of wielding his bat in the manner which marked his work during the exhibition series. The Goose cracked out a double and a triple, each of which came near being a homer, and, with Sam Rice, drove home two runs. George Loepp, making his first start this season before home fans, was credited with the only other Nat extra-base blow of the game, opening it with a double to left which his mates were unable to put to good use.

WIN THIRD STRAIGHT.

By defeating the Victory Post Nine, 14 to 4, on the Plaza diamond yesterday, the Eastern Midgets ran their win streak to three straight games. Pohl's pitching and the hitting of B. Robertson, whose five hits included a triple and home run, featured.

guards, shoulder saddles, the hip and thigh pads that Frank devised of his own experience and ingenuity for the protection of the football players, and say that in all Frank's time as trainer only two cadets were seriously hurt. One was Capt. Baxter, of the 1925 team, who went down with a broken ankle bone. The other was Dick O'Keefe, of the 1929 varsity, who was bumped on the head in the game at Champaign, Ill., last fall and invalided off the squad for the season. Bud Sprague, the captain in 1928, came out of the first scrimmage against Harvard that year with his nose out of joint, but that seems to have been no fault of Mr. Wandle's, for noseguards have not been stylish since 1910.

Mr. Wandle is very earnest about his electro-therapeutics and I must refrain from levity in describing them because I indulged in some gary remarks about them when he installed the whole shopful of machinery in his rolling infirmary for the trip to Stanford last fall and the wound to his feelings defied his own apparatus for weeks.

I said his corner of the gym looked not unlike an ultra-modern barber shop, not believing a man could not cure acute charley horse or stone bruise by passing currents and rays through the same. Mr. Wandle said he could and Capt. Jones said he did and Maj. Phil Fleming, the man who writes letters telling people that Yes, they have no more tickets for the Notre Dame game said Mr. Wandle could tolerate anything but flippant references to his electro-therapeutic appliances.

The Army will manage to muddle through, but the first few games won't seem official without Mr. Wandle and his satchel and his tomato-red face aglowing on the side lines. I doubt that life will seem official to him, either, for he has been drawing his rations and fuel from one branch or another of the Army since before the war, as recreation officer of the New Jersey National Guard, the Plattsburg Training Camp, the corps area, or the Military Academy. WESTBROOK PEGLER.

O'BRIEN TOSSERS WIN.

The C. A. O'Brien diamonders journeyed to Seabrook yesterday where they defeated the semipro team of that town, 12 to 11, in an eleven-inning thriller. Wiles and Raffo were the winners' battery, with the fielding of Mallinaff and the hitting of Franke figuring prominently in the victory.

ACME INSECTS BOOKING.

Manager Miller, of the Acme Insect Nine, is seeking games at Atlantic 1566. Games for next Saturday and Sunday are desired.

RED SOX AT HYATTSVILLE.

The Washington Red Sox and Hyattsville All-Star Nines have scheduled a game for next Sunday at 3 o'clock at Riverdale.

ELLA CINDERS—Stairway of Dreams — By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

APRIL SHOWERS MAY BRING MAY FLOWERS, BUT IF WE DON'T GET OUT OF THIS RAIN THEY'LL BE PLANTING THEM OVER US!
I USED TO WONDER WHAT PEOPLE DO WHEN THEY HAVEN'T ANY HOME! AND I'M STILL WONDERING!
SEE THAT SIGN, ELLA? I'LL BET THE OWNER IS KIND-HEARTED!
IT'S ALL RIGHT FOR YOU AND RAGS, BUT I CAN'T PASS FOR EITHER A CHILD OR A DOG! SO I'LL JUST GO ALONG AS CHAPERON!
HERE'RE THE SHEETS! THEY'RE THE KIND YOU CAN READ IN BED!
AND HERE'S THE BLANKET! IT MAY BE DISGUISED AS A RUG, BUT IT CAN'T FOOL ME!

THE FIRST STEP IS THE HARDEST, BUT AS A PILLOW IT'S ALL IT'S CRACKED UP TO BE! STILL, THERE'S PLENTY OF ROOM FOR MY BODY AND BOARD FOR MY NECK!
IF I WERE A GIRAFFE, I COULD SLEEP WITH MY HEAD ON THE TOP STEP AT THE SECOND FLOOR—BUT THAT'S ANOTHER STORY!

GASOLINE ALLEY — Things Not Going So Well

THE PROBATE DIVISION OF THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE IN LONDON IN ITS INVESTIGATION OF THE SECOND CODA WILL FOUND EVIDENCE OF FRAUD. CABLEGRAMS FROM AMERICA CONFIRMED THEIR DISCOVERIES. MR. CORPUS FOUND OUT HE WAS IN BAD JUST IN TIME.
THE SECOND CODA WILL, YOUR LORDSHIP, WAS PRESENTED BY MR. CORPUS, ATTORNEY FOR MME. OCTAVE, TO MY ASSOCIATE, MR. DILLINGWATER, SOLICITOR, FOR ENTERING BEFORE THIS COURT. THAT WAS UNDERTAKEN IN GOOD FAITH AND I EXCEEDINGLY REGRET THE POSITION IN WHICH WE HAVE BEEN PLACED.
I ORDER THAT ATTORNEY CORPUS BE BROUGHT BEFORE THE COURT TO SHOW CAUSE WHY HE SHOULD NOT BE SENTENCED FOR CONTEMPT AND INDICTED FOR CONSPIRACY.
I WAS A CHUMP, I SUPPOSE, BUT NO USE SQUAWKING OVER SPILT MILK. IT'S COSTING ME 200 POUNDS TO SHIP ON THIS DIRTY TUB TO LISBON WHERE I CAN TAKE A STEAMER TO RIO DE JANIERO UNTIL IT ALL BLOWS OVER.

POOR CHILD... YOU WEREN'T RAISED FOR WORK LIKE THAT WHAT'S IN THE PACKAGE, HATTIE?
IT'S HALF A COCOANUT PIE, AND A BAG OF FRIED POTATOES. THE COOK GAVE THEM TO ME.....
GEE, THAT'S A SWELL JOB....

THE GUMPS — And $4,000,000 Takes It

YOU SEE THE PICTURE OF IT— IT WAS SO BRILLIANT THEY HAD TO PHOTOGRAPH IT THROUGH A PIECE OF SMOKED GLASS— WE KNOW IT'S GENUINE BECAUSE THERE NEVER WAS ANOTHER DIAMOND LIKE THE GREAT MOGUL— IT COULD NOT BE DUPLICATED— SO WHEN WE SAY WE HAVE A STONE JUST LIKE THIS— THERE IS NO ARGUMENT—
WHAT A BEAUTY— BUT HOW CAN YOU PROVE THAT THIS IS THE GENUINE MOGUL DIAMOND— HOW DO YOU KNOW THAT IT IS?
IT WAS STOLEN FROM THE MOGULS BY A HINDOO MAGICIAN WHO HYPNOTIZED THE ROYAL GUARD IN CHARGE OF IT INTO BELIEVING THAT HIS WHOLE RACE WOULD BE DESTROYED IN TWENTY-FOUR HOURS— UNLESS HE DELIVERED THE STONE TO HIM IMMEDIATELY— THE STONE WAS KEPT IN THE FAMILY FOR CENTURIES AND CENTURIES— BEING HANDED DOWN FROM ONE GENERATION TO ANOTHER— IT WAS KEPT ON AN ISLAND IN A VAULT COMPLETELY SURROUNDED BY BROKEN GLASS— THERE WAS A PENALTY OF DEATH TO ANYONE CAUGHT WHO WAS NOT BARE FOOTED— ITS HIDING PLACE REMAINED A SECRET FOR OVER A THOUSAND YEARS— UNTIL THE REIGNING KING HEARD OF THE TREASURE AND ONLY BY TORTURE WAS HE ABLE TO LOCATE IT—
AND HOW DID YOU COME IN POSSESSION OF IT?
TO FORCE THE OLD FELLOW WHO POSSESSED IT TO REVEAL ITS HIDING PLACE THE KING ORDERED HIS HEAD SHAVED AND A CROWN OF PLASTER TO ENCIRCLE IT— INTO THIS HE POURED BOILING OIL— HE THEN SENT A LARGE FORCE TO THE ISLAND AND ON RETURNING WITH IT THEY WERE SET UPON BY BANDITS— WHO STOLE IT FROM THEM— IT WAS NEVER RECOVERED— LATER THE BANDITS WERE KILLED— THEIR CHIEF CAPTURED AND PUT IN PRISON WHERE HE DIED— HE ALWAYS CLAIMED HE KNEW NOTHING OF THE DIAMOND— WHILE SHOWING A PARTY THROUGH THE OLD MUSTY PRISON SOMETIME AGO— ONE OF THE GUIDES CUT HIS HAND ON SOMETHING BURIED IN THE WALL IN ONE OF THE DARKEST DUNGEONS— HE DUG INTO THE PLASTER— AND CAN YOU IMAGINE HIS SURPRISE WHEN THIS GREAT BIG DIAMOND FELL AT HIS FEET? THE OLD BANDIT HID IT THERE CENTURIES AGO—
I WILL GIVE YOU A CHECK FOR A MILLION DOLLARS— THE BALANCE WHEN THE STONE IS DELIVERED

FRENCH NINE VICTIM OF TIGERS

Takoma Team Rallies to Overcome Lead and Wins, 8-6.

OUTHITTING their rivals, 19 to 7, and getting the breaks to overcome a 5-to-2 lead, the Takoma Tigers took the French A. C. into camp yesterday, 8 to 6, on the Georgia Avenue diamond.

Davidson started on the mound for the Tigers, but his unsteadiness brought Skinner to the mound in the eighth. Colliflower began strongly but was combed for the margin in the later innings.

A four-run rally in the sixth coupled with a two-run scoring bee in the seventh decided the issue for the Tigers. Three-base hits by Williams aided materially in both innings. Henley handled ten chances afield to play an outstanding part for the Tigers, while Wolf and Colliere were best for the Frenchs.

The Tigers play a strong opponent next Sunday when they meet the St. Mary's Celtics at Baggett's Field in Alexandria.

EVENTS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

ARLINGTON TO STUDY JAIL ENLARGEMENT

Welfare Director Advises Caution in Building at Present.

STATE MOVE MAY AID

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Whether Arlington County should at this time make any large expenditures for increasing the capacity of its jail is a serious question, according to a letter received today by E. Lester Bennett, secretary of the Arlington County Civic Federation, from Arthur W. James, director of the bureau of county and city organization of the State department of public welfare at Richmond.

Mr. James' letter is in response to a resolution adopted at the last meeting of the Civic Federation, requesting the public welfare department to make an investigation of the Arlington County jail. The resolution cited a section of the State code which authorizes the department to transfer from county jail to State prison farms, prisoners whose sentences are final.

The purpose of the resolution was to determine whether the statute cited would not bring relief to the conditions at the local jail, which is so badly crowded that the Organized Women Voters and other organizations have recently requested the board of supervisors to enlarge it or t obuild a new one.

Mr. James' letter points out that the General Assembly this year provided for the establishment of a State industrial prison farm for women and for the establishment of additional farms for all types of misdemeanors.

"It seems that we may say with certainty," Mr. James writes, "that within the year the county jails will be relieved of the women and that within the next two or three years we will begin to take out of them more and more of the men who have received final sentences.

"It is a serious question," continues Mr. James, "whether or not, in view of the development in the State sysem, a county should make any large expenditures for additions to its jail.

"We have not been able to say in any of the situations similar to Arlington's that have recently arisen, that a county should not rebuild or add to the jails, but we do advise close study of the situation and urge caution at this time."

A special meeting of the Ashton Heights Citizens Assocaition has been called for Friday night at the clubhouse of the Woman's Club for the purpose of considering the proposed bond issue for school development. Professor Fletcher Kemp, county superintendent of schools, has been asked to address the meeting.

County Treasurer E. Wade Ball advises that next Saturday is the last day for payment of the capitation tax for those desiring to participate in proposed election and the regular election in November.

Plans have been completed for a square dance to be held Monday night in Odd Fellows Hall for the benefit of the Old Dominion Band.

The regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Cherrydale School, scheduled for Monday night, has been postponed until Tuesday night on account of the Easter holiday.

The Arlington District Council of Citizens Associations will hold its regular meeting in the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce rooms, Clarendon, Monday evening. Reports on the proposed bond issue for the schools will be an issue to be considered.

State Senator Frank L. Ball will speak at the meeting of the Glebewood Citizens Association at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Monroe Monday night.

Waverly Hills Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold its meeting at the Mount Olivet Methodist Protestant Church Wednesday evening.

The regular meeting of the Ballston Citizens Association will be held in auditorium of the firehouse Tuesday evening.

A business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Mount Olivet Methodist Protestant Church will be held Wednesday night following the regular service.

T. P. Gary, general chairman of the minstrel show committee, announces that special features are being arranged. The performances will be May 2 and 3. Among the headliners will be Miss Lindsey West, of Alexandria. Rehearsals are Monday and Thursday evenings in the community house.

The Washington, Maryland & Virginia Coach Co. has made application to extend its lines, terminating at Fort Myer, along Pershing drive through Lyon Park to Glebe road. A hearing will be held in Richmond before the State Utilities Commission April 22.

The citizens' association voted some months ago against a permit for a bus line along Pershing drive in Lyon Park, upon recommendation of a special committee from Ashton Heights and Glebewood, other interested communities.

Delegates of the State auxiliaries will be guests of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Jefferson District Fire Department during the quarterly State meeting to be held in the department hall, Friday, April 25. The meeting will begin at 10 a. m., with an address of welcome by the president, Mrs. Ethel T. Thrope. Luncheon will be at 12 o'clock, followed by a one-hour program of short speeches and music.

The speakers will be State Senator Frank L. Ball, Walter U. Varney, president of the Arlington-Fairfax Firemen's Relief Association, and Chief G. Frank Allwine, of the Jefferson Department. Mrs. C. W. Lee and Mrs. Ruby Tracey are the committee in charge.

3,000 Persons Attend Sunrise Easter Rites

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., April 20.—The second annual sunrise Easter service here at Riverside Park was attended by 3,000 people this morning, when Easter hymns and anthems were sung by the Elks Glee Club and the Junior League Choral Club.

T. F. Reece, religious educator director of First Baptist Church, conducted the service, which was largely of scripture and Easter hymns.

Dailey, Morton Opponents For Martinsburg Mayor

William C. Morton (left), Democrat, former superintendent of schools, and Chris Dailey, Republican councilman, are the nominees for Mayor of Martinsburg, W. Va., in the municipal elections.

Councilman and Former School Official to Head Tickets May 12.

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 20.—Chris Dailey, a member of the present City Council, and William C Morton, former superintendent of city schools here, will head the Republican and Democratic tickets, respectively, at the municipal election here May 12. They emerged from the municipal primary April 13 as the nominees, the former with a bare 37-vote majority over present Mayor George W. Appleby and the latter with more than 800 majority over his lone opponent C. P. Howell.

A contest on the Republican side is promised, Mayor Appleby having served notice that he will ask a recount if the routine canvass does not disclose a heavier lead for Mr. Dailey. The Republican primary was a bitter one, one of its angles reaching the State Supreme Court. The division appeared first within the present council. Two of the present Republican members of City Council were defeated for renomination, and a third was renominated.

Mr. Dailey is a Baltimore and Ohio shop man here. Mr. Morton is in the insurance business.

Honor Fraternity Names 21 Members

Two Professors Elected to Organization at Virginia University.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 20.—Two members of the faculty and nineteen graduate and professional students of the University of Virginia were elected to membership in Sigma Xi, national honorary technical fraternity, at a meeting held at the home of Dr. William A. Kepner, president of the Virginia chapter. Their initiation will take place at the annual meeting of the fraternity, to be held next month, the date to be announced later.

The professors honored are Dr. Orland Emile White, professor of agricultural biology and director of the Blandy experimental farm, and Dr. Dudley Crofford Smith, associate professor of dematology and syphilology.

Students elected are: William C. Barrett, jr., of Norfolk, Va.; Paul Whitman Bowman, of Collingdale, Pa.; Horace E. Hayden, jr., of Washington, D. C.; Carl H. McConnell, of East Radford, Va.; John Maxwell Robeson, jr., of Lynchburg, Va.; Thomas W. Whitaker, of Monrovia, Calif.; Richmond Thomas Bell, of Milwaukee, Wis.; George L. Cunningham, of Greer, S. C.; Robert Francis Selden, of Hampton, Va.; Carlisle Monroe Thacker, of St. Matthews, S. C.; Thomas Aubrey White, of Rockingham, N. C.; Fred Anderegg, of Suffern, N. Y.; Raymond Smith Edmundson, of Winchester, Va.; Robert Louis Echols, of University, Va.; Joseph William Houck, of Harrisonburg, Va.; Margaret Elizabeth Moriarty, of Newton, Mass.; William H. Paine, of Baltimore, Md.; Everly John Workman, of University, Va., and Avery Henry Reed, sr., of Charlottesville, Va.

Fires Sweep Homes; $1,200 Damage Done

A defective flue is believed to have been the cause of the blaze which yesterday afternoon did $1.000 damage to a four-story building at 345 Pennsylvania avenue. The fire is believed to have started in a bathroom on the second floor.

A fire of undetermind origin did $200 damage to the home of Cora Maate at 411 Tenth street southwest yesterday afternoon. The two-story dwelling and contents were damaged by the blaze.

Bandits Drag Autoist From Car and Get $40

Two men who hailed James A. Templeton, of 1808 I street northwest, early yesterday as he was driving his car at Twenty-sixth and B streets, dragged him from the automobile at gun point and robbed him of $40.

The bandits made their get-away in Templeton's machine. The victim gave a good description of them to the police.

Woman Burned on Face When Stove Explodes

Mary Greene, 31 years old, of 1148 Sixth street northeast, suffered second degree burns on the hands and face yesterday afternoon when a gas stove exploded. The woman was removed to Casualty Hospital.

Mrs. Greene was cooking in the kitchen of her home when the accident occurred.

Man Slain in Row Insisting on Radio

Companion Who Preferred Phonograph Music Is Sought by Police.

Freddie Cooper's love for radio entertainment caused his death early yesterday.

Cooper, who was colored and lived at 830 Twenty-fifth street, while attending a social on the third floor of 2500 I street, wanted radio entertainment at 4:10 in the morning. He was opposed by another colored man who insisted that a phonograph record be played.

A heated argument followed, police say, during which Cooper was stabbed to death. His assailant, whose identity is known to the police, escaped.

Cooper was pronounced dead by a physician at Emergency Hospital. Detective Sergeant Weiss and Detective H. H. Carper are searching for the slayer.

Shows Prepare Alexandria Stand

Spring Festival of Fire Department to Open for Week Tonight.

Hours before dawn this morning, a steady stream of orange wagons began to roll from the Southern Railway yards to the old Cardinals' Baseball Park at the head of King street in Alexandria as final details are being completed for the spring festival of the Alexandria Fire Department which begins tonight.

All of the amusement features of the festival this year are again in charge of the Melville-Reiss Shows, which made its initial appearance in this territory for the Alexandria firemen last spring. A midway covering more than 540,000 square feet will be presented by the show which arrived in the Alexandria yards early this morning in its own train of 35 all-steel cars, from its permanent winter quarters at Charlotte, N C. Included in the attractions of the midway will be thirteen shows and ten rides.

The festival will continue every afternoon and night this week, until Saturday, when the shows will move on for the second week of their 1930 season at Philadelphia.

Virginian Is Shot Dead Near Home

Farmer's Body Is Found With Empty Shotgun Shell Lying Nearby.

Gate City, Va., April 20 (A.P.).—Shelby Flannery, 32, was found shot to death near his home, 8 miles from here, today, with gunshot wounds scattered over the front of his body. Mrs. Flannery said her husband, a farmer, left home about 8 p. m., Saturday to cross a river, 500 yards away. He had been gone only a few minutes when she heard a single shot, she said, but thought nothing of the shot until today when Flannery was found dead.

An empty shotgun shell was found a short distance from Flannery's body and wads from the load were nearby. Flannery's boat was tied to a tree. Apparently he had been shot as he stepped to the bank.

Sheriff Harvey Culbertson, of Scott County, began an investigation immediately after discovery of the body.

Card Party Planned As Hospital Benefit

The lady board of managers of the Alexandria Hospital will give a card party May 6, both afternoon and evening, at the George Mason Hotel, for the benifit of the building fund of that institution, and have issued a request that no other entertainment be arranged on that date, owing to the need of funds to enlarge the hospital.

Miss Constance Boush is general chairman for the affair, and Mrs. Henderson Carter will be in charge of tables, Rrs. McFarland, prizes, and Rrs. Mankin, candy.

RUM ARRESTS MADE IN FAIRFAX COUNTY

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 919-J-1.

The Fairfax County authorities were busy making the rounds of the public dance halls in the county Saturday night. Five persons were arrested and fined for drunkenness, one for driving while drunk and two for sale and possession of intoxicating liquor. The police of the county are waging a vigorous campaign against drinking and rowdyism at these places.

At Chimney Villa Dance Hall, on the Lee highway between Falls Church and Merrifield, Alvin Brooks, of Washington; Albert Howard, John Simms and Thomas Simms, of Fairfax, and Lee Rose, of Franconia, were arrested and taken before Justice of the Peace J. T. Moling at Falls Church, where each was fined $19.50 on a charge of being drunk. A man by the name of Rittenhow, of Centerville, was arrested on a charge of driving while drunk. He was taken before Justice of the Peace R. D. Wharton, at Centerville, who held him for the action of the grand jury at the May term of court under a $500 bond.

Jesse Parker, of Cameron Run, was arrested on a charge of sale of one pint of liquor. He will be given a hearing Monday, April 28, before Justice of the Peace A. C. Ritchie at Fairfax. Clarence Cockeril, of Herndon, was arrested charged with the sale of three pints of liquor. He will be given a hearing this evening at 7:30 o'clock before Justice of the Peace George Williams at Herndon.

The annual outing of the altar boys of St. James' Catholic Church, at West Falls Church, will be held this morning. They will leave the church at 9 o'clock. In case of rain the trip will be postponed until tomorrow.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Herndon Volunteer Fire Department will meet this evening in Wilkins Hall. Reports will be heard from the committees appointed for the membership drive. The new by-laws of the auxiliary will be considered.

The Fairfax County Pomona Grange will meet in the Oakton School Auditorium tomorrow evening. The lecturer's hour will be in charge of Mrs. A. Hermon Roberts, of Mount Vernon Grange.

Mrs. L. H. Crowder, Mrs. T. M. Corner and Mrs. I. B. Fadley will represent the McLean Parent-Teacher Association at the annual convention of the District Parent-Teacher Association in Washington, April 22 and 23.

The annual meeting of the St. Mary's congregation at McLean has been called for this evening for the election of a new vestry.

The Girls Friendly Society of Woodlawn will hold a candlelight service this evening in the Pohick Episcopal Church. The Rev. C. A. Langston has charge of the service.

The Evening Study Club at Falls Church will meet this evening at the home of Mrs. J. W. Garner in Falls Church. Mrs. G. B. Fadley will review the book, "While Peter Sleeps."

Accotink Lodge of Odd Fellows will meet this evening to make final plans for the special services which will be held April 27 in the Woodlawn Community House to commemorate the founding of Odd Fellowship of America.

The Pioneer Grange at Annandale will give an Easter party this evening to celebrate the close of the recent membership campaign. A box supper will be served. Mrs. A. H. Holland, Mrs. Milton Hartley and Mrs. W. W. Thomas have planned a program of games and entertainment. Plans are now being made for the dance which the Grange plans to give May 3.

Kenmore Council, Daughters of America, of Andrew Chapel, will take a candidate, Walter Wyncoop, to the meeting of the Betsy Ross Council at Vienna for initiation this evening. The local chapter will hold its regular meeting Thursday evening in the schoolhouse at Andrew Chapel.

Five Are Seized In Lottery Raid

Prisoners Held on Bond of $300 Each for Court in Cumberland.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 20.—A raid conducted on a pool room of Clay & Robertson, on North Liberty street, near the postoffice, late yesterday resulted in the arrest of five charged with conducting a lottery. Walter Clay, jr., and William C. Robertson, alleged proprietors; Charles H. Farmer, George Long and David Welsh were held in bond of $300 each for peoples court.

Sheriff William R. Harvey, who with two deputies, made the raid, said it was based on the work of the two undercover men. A metal box containing several thousand slips and notations was seized in the basement. Sheriff Harvey said he was refused admittance to the basement and gained entrance as three men, one of them Welsh, emerged. A number of game boards and tickets on the English Derby and the Kentucky Derby were also seized. Notebooks were also found.

The raiding party remained an hour, the various seizures being concealed about the establishment. "Dusty" Twyman was arrested at the Booker T. Washington Hotel, charged with the same offense.

Two Held as Suspects In Holdup and Robbery

Special to The Washington Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., April 20. Calvin and Chester Kidwell are being held in jail here as suspects in the holdup of C. T. Bevans at his brother's home in Paw Paw a week ago, when the sum of $625 was taken from him at the point of a revolver. The men claim they were not in Paw Paw at the time of the robbery.

Mr. Bevans, alone in the home, was forced to go upstairs to the house safe, open it with the assistance of an iron which the robber secured, and the robber then escaped. The robber's use of the word "we" prompted the hunt for a pair rather than one man. D. G. Bevans, merchant, in whose home the holdup took place, had brought the money from Cumberland, Md., that afternoon.

APPLE TREES BLOOM FOR FESTIVAL DATE

Affair to Open With Parade of Costumed Children of Three States.

BALLS WILL BE FEATURE

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., April 20.—With the apple blossoms of 11,000,000 trees breaking from their green prisons, all Winchester is in the midst of preparations for the seventh Shenandoah apple blossom festival, which will be held here April 24 and 25. Early varieties of apples in this vicinity already are in full bloom and the commercial crop is beginning to shed its winter covering and bring forth the greatest promise of a bounteous harvest in the history of Virginia.

Complete plans for the festival have just been announced by Nelson F. Richards, director general of the event, over which Miss Suzanne Pollard, daughter of Gov. Pollard of Virginia, will reign as queen, with a court composed of 43 girls of Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Parade Opens Festival.

The festival will officially begin at 10 o'clock on April 24, with the "Parade of the Blossoms" through the streets of Winchester. Ten thousand beautifully costumed school children from Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia, will participate, with bands, floats and exhibits which have been organized this year on a scale never before attempted.

At the hour of starting the parade special trains from Brunswick, Knoxville and Sandy Hook, in Maryland, and Harpers Ferry and Charles Town, in West Virginia, are scheduled to arrive. Garland R. Quarles, of Winchester, will be director of the first parade, assisted by John J. McCabe, Miss Frieda Koontz and Leslie D. Kline. At 2 in the afternoon band concerts will be given at the Handly Stadium.

Coronation of Queen.

The coronation of the queen will be at 3 o'clock, to music furnished by the United States Navy Band and the Glee Club of Harrisonburg State Teachers College. The coronation will be followed by a pageant, staged by Handley High School, and an aerial show at the Winchester Airport, and a series of band concerts. The evening will be made gay by a torchlight parade of all fire companies of Winchester and visiting companies from Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia.

The reception of the princesses by Queen Shenandoah VII will take place at 9 o'clock and the annual Apple blossom ball will follow at 9:30 o'clock. To take care of the crowd, an apple blossom ball will also be held at the same time at Jordan Springs, six miles from Winchester.

The morning of the second day will be devoted to another pageant, and the afternoon will be featured by the grand parade, the premier event of the festival. This is the great event of the festival and 75,000 to 100,000 people are expected at Winchester on the second day. Two festival balls will be given the second evening and those will complete the program.

Golden Wedding Celebrated.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., April 20 (Special).—Mr. and Mrs. George A. Michael recently celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary here with about 50 friends as guests. Their wedding ceremony was reenacted and with them at the altar stood Mrs. Clara Hovermale, of Baltimore, and Wesley Michael, who were witnesses to the wedding 50 years ago.

"MONTANA MOON." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, starring Joan Crawford, supported by Johnny Mack Brown, Dorothy Sebastian, Ricardo Cortez, Cliff Edwards, Benny Rubin and Karl Dane. Directed by Malcolm St. Clair. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by Mary Porter Russell.

It would take more than a Montana moon and a Hollywood star to clothe with authenticity the story unfolded in this latest exposition of youth gone wild. You won't believe a word of it, but you'll have fun in learning why. A background of the wide open spaces, a melodious cowboy chorus, a lively comedy performance by Joan Crawford and a perfect tango by Joan and Ricardo Cortez are ends in themselves. None of it can be taken seriously, but the portions that fail to please are in the minority.

The Montana setting is reached like this. Wealthy Mr. Prescott departs from New York to inspect his ranch, accompanied in his private car by daughters Joan and Lizzie and an assortment of their thrill-seeking friends. Joan is worried because her fatal charm is attracting Lizzie's beau, so she hops off the train the night before their destination is reached and buys a ticket back East. Then she meets a handsome cowboy who says "that-a-way," and decides to travel with him instead, sleeping under Montana moon by night and riding horseback by day in a cute outfit that must have fallen like manna, because of her need.

When they get married and join the girl's party at the ranch, there is no end of trouble because the simple hearted rancher doesn't approve of the wild night life and promiscuous kissing that takes place right there before his eyes and ours. You can't blame him very much, either. Until you've seen this picture, you've no idea how bad the younger generation really is!

Some delightful ensemble singing takes place before the climax is reached via the kidnaping route, and Joan—she is Joan in the picture, too—fits snugly into a role presumably built for her use. Johnny Mack Brown, his natural Southern accent burdened with the colloquialisms of his calling, is cast as the cowboy, and Dorothy Sebastian as Lizzie. Cliff Edwards, Benny Rubin and Karl Dane are on hand as comedians.

"Color Rythm" is a stage show that will make you sit up and take notice. Following the fewer but better principle, it features only three acts, each of them exceptionally good in its line, and embellishes them with novel chorus numbers and interesting lighting effects. June Carr, a sprightly little song and dance comedienne, has a way all her own of doing to you what numerous others try to do and fail. Serge Flash starts out with more or less conventional juggling and works his way into an intricate and difficult performance. The three Small brothers are experts in the tap dancing field.

As for Dave Schooler, who does the mastering of ceremony honors, there is no one more versatile. He dances with the chorus, clowns with Miss Carr, and does some cartooning that is excellent and renders a classical selection on the piano with the aid of Harry Borjes and the orchestra.

No short subjects made their appearance at the performance reviewed.

RKO-KEITH

"ALIAS FRENCH GERTIE." Radio production, from Bayard Veiller's play, "The Chatterbox," starring Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon. Directed by George Archainbaud. Reviewed Saturday night by C. Ransom.

During several years, about when the century was entering its teens, there was a flux of plays exploiting the sweet side of crooks. It was a sort of fashion of the time, with a savor of daring novelty, and it worked itself out to the point of absurdity, as fashions will. Mr. Veiller's play, from which the present film has been drawn, must have been a relatively inconspicuous member of the group, but it clearly dates from that period. The theme survives, to be sure, in many of the more modern movies of the underworld, but generally speaking the public nowadays likes its racketeers rougher and rawer and, by the same token, realer.

Here we have our Bebe and our Ben, than whom no more likable pair of personalities can be dished out of Hollywood, appearing in the guise of notorious thieves, to the manner bred, and our evening's pleasure must be found in wondering how they can do so, and in rejoicing at their final decision not to do so any more. A definite limit is set upon our delights by the fact that we don't believe a word of it.

Gertie's particular racket is hiring out as a French maid who can just manage a word or two of English, and then clearing out with the jewels. Jimmie is a safe robber, very vain of his magic fingertips. Encountering each other while intent on looting the same boudoir wall-safe, they fall in love, and when the police arrive their mutual behaviour is just noble. When Jimmie is freed after a year, he and Gertie go in partnership and accumulate $30,000, after which they decide it would be nice for Jimmie to be an honest broker. When Jimmie's new business partner steals the 30 grand that Jimmie had stolen he gets terribly sore for some reason, and decides to fall back on his fingertips. But Gertie has made a sterner resolution to be good and rather than let Jimmie do this thing she puts a neat bullet hole through his right hand. So Jimmie, with his vanity literally punctured, finds he was all wrong and forgives everything. Clinch.

The story, such as it is, is well carried out, with the handsome Bebe to look at and her voice pleasant to hear, both in French and in Hoboken English, with Ben Lyon acting naturally but not crookily, and with several interesting character bits by Robert Emmet O'Connor as a fatherly detective, Betty Pierce, John Ince and Daisy Belmore, among others. Clever camera shots are frequent.

Among the short numbers the most notable is an "Aesop's Fable" cartoon which at last takes a happy new departure for this series, in a simply uproarious burlesque of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Any one aching for laughter should make it a point to see this. Another short comedy has to do with a traveling beauty show and its conflict with rural authorities; a promising topic ruined by a few bad actors. There is a good newsreel and the R-K-Olians do their stuff. "Up the Congo," announced for this week, seems to be deferred.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

RIALTO

"CAPTAIN OF THE GUARD." Universal musical spectacle, costarring John Boles and Laura La Plante. Story by Houston Branch; music by Charles Wakefield Cadman and Heinz Roemheld; direction by John S. Robertson and Paul Fejos. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL

It would be difficult to imagine a more auspicious reopening than was celebrated at the Rialto on Saturday.

With the Temple of Apollo foyer of the theater banked high with seasonable Easter blooms, the house recarpeted, orchestra and sound projection vastly improved and an audience that overflowed the capacity of the auditorium in attendance, it was no less than a gala welcome that was accorded Mr. Shalrick's "Temple of the Muses" upon its return to the roster of the Capital's downtown, first-run amusement centers.

Tremendous impetus was accorded the feature film, "Captain of the Guard," widely heralded, prior to its release, as "La Marseillaise," by the presence in the flesh Saturday and yesterday of John Boles, the singing star of the picture, cofeatured with Laura La Plante.

Mr. Boles' appearance at the performance I attended was timed and executed with rare cunning. Unannounced by the customary halting speech, Mr. Boles was discovered upon the stage, precisely upon the spot from which he had just faded in the film, when the lights came up. I recall no local occasion upon which any star ever received a more spontaneous or more enthusiastic reception than was bestowed upon this natural and uneffected young Texan. I suspect that the crowd rather expected him to sing, but, having sung in fine voice throughout the length of the celluloid, I am not sure it was not the part of good judgment to confine himself merely to a few graceful remarks, greeted with further resounding salvos of applause.

"Captain of the Guard" concerns itself with the same commodities of the theater that entered into the dramatic composition of "Passion"—the events leading up to, and marking, the outbreak of the French Revolution. I would not say that the narrative at all times keeps pace with the pretentiousness of the scale upon which it has been visualized, but it does, from time to time, reveal flashes of magnificent photography, moments that strike fire and a final, cumulative power that is adequate to the purposes of the fanciful tale of the birth of the French national anthem, even if not positively overwhelming in its depiction of the frenzy of a revolution that gloriously, but bloodily, altered the whole history of world events.

The musical embellishment is, if anything, richer than might best serve the uses of the drama. Perhaps that is why it is denominated a musical spectacle. I mean to say that more than once during the progress of the action there is music where none actually would be.

However, any alteration of this aspect of the entertainment that would serve to diminish the prevalence of the Boles voice would be unfortunate. His singing is superior to his acting in some of the passages, but the fault is principally Mr. Robertson's, whose direction is not always all that it should be. Laura La Plante plays a modified Jean d'Arc sympathetically and seems to sing the songs allotted the part effectively, although after the deceptions of "Show Boat" I wouldn't be sure.

Others of note in the cast include Sam De Grasse, James Marcus, Lionel Belmore, Evelyn Hall and Stuart Holmes, who does a particularly deft bit as Louis XVI.

The surrounding bill is comprised of "Sixteen Sweeties," a Pathe tabloid revue, Graham McNamee enunciating the events that appealed to the cameraman as news and the contributions of Ray Hart's revamped orchestra.

COLUMBIA

"PUTTIN' ON THE RITZ." United Artists' production, starring Harry Richman, supported by Joan Bennett, James Gleason, Lilyan Tashman and Aileen Pringle. Story by John W. Considine, jr., with dialogue by William K. Wells and James Gleason. Directed by Edward H. Sloman. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

They may have felt the need of building up a Clara Bow ballyhoo about this fellow Harry Richman, but now that his first picture is released, the lad gives a pretty good account of himself. Despite a story that is no newer than the oldest of the backstage fables you have seen, "Puttin' on the Ritz," by virtue of a gorgeous production, superlative cast and at least two knockout tunes is a no less potent box-office smash than "The Broadway Melody," "Gold Diggers of Broadway" or any of the other similar works that have preceded it.

Two song pluggers are bounced out on their ears just as a sister act also is little less than starving to death. They team up into a foursome and are tabbed on the small-time by a big-time producer. Two of the four are called into New York to go big on Broadway, while the other half continues as something this side of a panic out in the sticks. The two nominated for the Broadway revue are Harry Richman and Joan Bennett; the lesser lights, Jimmy Gleason and Lilyan Tashman. Mr. Richmond, as Harry Raymond, goes high hat with the coming of success, and the pals who "knew him when" eventually have to pull him together when bad booze has made him blind. If this thing had to be epitomized as to plot, I should say that it might be called the syncopated epic of egotism.

The syncopated part is not the least attractive of the picture's components. Granted that he is not much of an actor, when Harry Richman tears into a song something besides noise is apt to come out of it. This is particularly true of the piece that I take it is called "Singing a Vagabond Song," or something like that, and "Puttin' on the Ritz," a tricky number both as to tempo and lyrics and one that enlists both a white and sepia ensemble, working on different levels of vision with devastating effect.

The surprise of the picture is Joan Bennett. In addition to photographing beautifully, she imbues her role with a quality of wistfulness that is wholly disarming. I imagine you will be watching her as much as any one in the cast. And that is high praise, for you will be watching Mr. Richman, Jimmy Gleason, Lilyan Tashman and Aileen Pringle plenty! Of these Jimmy Gleason and Miss Tashman are way out in front.

Foremost among the auxiliaries is the much-touted "Hot Dog," all-canine comedy. It is as amusing as promised, and I shall never understand how Jules White and Zion Meyers, the directors, handled their cast as well as they did. The Hearst Metrotone News and orchestral overture of popular hits complete an S. R. O. program.

FOX

"CAMEO KIRBY." A William Fox presentation of the play by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, adapted for the screen by Marion Orth; featuring J. Harold Murray and Norma Terris, supported by Charles Morton, John Hyams, Robert Edeson, Myrna Loy and Stepin Fetchit. Directed by Irving Cummings. Reviewed Saturday evening by W. A. Whitney.

For its portion of the present week, through tomorrow night, at which time the Metropolitan Opera Company takes charge until Saturday, William Fox's conception of the old story of the Mississippi River gambler of the crinoline days occupies the screen of the cinemathedral.

The old story, even in its subtle ramifications, is too well known to warrant elaboration here. Opening with the gay Mardi Gras festival in New Orleans, progressing up (or down) the river, and closing on the traditional Southern plantation, the picture offers nothing new on the threadbare plot. The addition of songs is done at the expense of time and movement, the singing being so suddenly introduced, notwithstanding introductions that are more accompaniment that cues, that the listener is jarred at the contrast.

To J. Harold Murray and Norma Terris fall the leads, and to Mr. Murray also the only singing role. His songs, "Romance," "After a Million Dreams" and "Home Is Heaven," by Walter Donaldson and Edgar Leslie, and "Tankard and Bowl," by Ed Brady and Fred Strauss, are very agreeably sung, yet, as stated before, somewhat out of place. Miss Terris is adequate as the Southern belle. Myrna Loy, as the Creole menace, gives a very acceptable characterization.

Douglas Gilmore plays the villain; Robert Edeson, the girl's father, and Charles Morton, the girl's would-be lover. Stepin Fetchit has another of those special-to-order roles where his somnolent philosophy of life is admirably expressed in the recitative song "I'm a Peaceful Man" (Brady-Strauss).

A release of the Fox Movietone News is the only subsidiary.

Panchon and Marco's idea, called "Accordion," occupies the stage. Besides singing "Dream Lover" from "The Love Parade" as his special number, Alexander Callam introduces Burt and Lehmann, comedians; Theodore and Katya, whose mechanical doll dance is exceptionally well done; Nat Spector, blackface comedian with some new songs but more ancient gags; Mary Price, delightful acrobatic dancer; and Arnold Hartman, the boy accordion virtuoso, assisted by the six accordion beauties.

The orchestra, under the direction of Leon Brusiloff, presents Hosmer's delightful "Southern Rhapsody" as its overture.

LITTLE THEATER

"DAMAGED SOULS." Public Welfare Pictures Corporation production, starring Corliss Palmer. Story and continuity by Curt von Resarf. Direction by William H. Curran. Cinematography by Ted Tetzlaff.

Delivering a smashing and decisive blow to big city vice conditions, "Damaged Souls," a drama of sex and hygiene, opened yesterday at the Little Theater for women exclusively.

The picture is an intensely dramatic one and shows with remarkable candor and clarity the evils that beset the inexperienced young in the more thickly populated centers.

"Damaged Souls" concerns itself with the adventures of Lily Brown, the character portrayed by Corliss Palmer, a typical small-town girl who marries a glib-tongued city chap without knowing anything of his morals, family or circumstances. He takes her to the city, and there she learns that her husband expects her to go to work in a cheap burlesque theater to pay their living expenses.

In addition to this she returns from the theater one day to find her husband in the arms of another woman. Leaving him, and thrown on her own resources, she gradually reaches a depth too horrible for description.

The supporting cast is a good one. Playing the leading male role, opposite Miss Palmer, is Dave Findley, a juvenile leading man who gives promise of early stardom. Alphonse Martell and Freeman Wood are cast in the heavy roles.

METROPOLITAN

"MAMMY." Warner Bros. production, starring Al Jolson, supported by Lois Moran, Lowell Sherman, Hobart Bosworth, Louise Dresser and Mitchell Lewis. Adapted from "Mr. Bones," a play by Irving Berlin, with songs by the author. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Reviewed Saturday night.

The sentimentalizing has been largely minimized in this one, and Al Jolson is himself again. As a blackface minstrel man, he manages to get something of his old-time pep and punch into a series of songs that include several of his hits of days gone by and several, also, that are said to have been written especially for this production by Irving Berlin, who likewise wrote the play. The old songs are the best. Possibly something went awry with my ear for tunefulness Saturday evening, but the songs most assiduously "plugged" by Mr. Jolson seemed to me the least attractive of the many he sang.

Lest there be some charge of prejudice, I shall be content to list the numbers sung by the star and let you take your choice: "Let Me Sing and "I'm Happy," "To My Mammy," "The Call of the South," "Knights of the Road," "Across the Breakfast Table, Looking at You," "Who Paid the Rent for Mrs. Rip Van Winkle," and "The Albany Night Boat."

The story of "Mammy" is very little of her and all of her boy! Al Fuller is a burnt cork ace until, through the criminal machinations of one of his fellow players, he is arrested for asssult with a dangerous weapon, having shot the interlocutor as the climax of a comedy "gag," in which blank bullets were supposed to have been used. The play gets just a trifle maudlin from this point on, but "this point on" all comes so far behind a lot of clever clowning that it really doesn't matter.

What does matter is that Jolson can sing, Jolson can read lines and Jolson is funny. The rest is merely emphasis of all this, contributed by a cast of exceptionally high rating. Lowell Sherman is just a bit confounding, in his role of interlocutor, by turning out to be not such a bad sort, despite his inescapable reputation for villainy. It is natural that both boys should have loved so charming a figure as Nora Meadows, daughters of the owners of the troupe, and that Mitchell Lewis should have done just what he did by swapping real slugs for the blanks. Hobart Bosworth is the owner, Meadows.

Nothing has recently struck me as quite so incongruous as casting Louise Dresser in the title role—as the mother of Al Jolson. Whoever suggested this should have carried the thing to its logical conclusion by casting Philippe de Lacey or Mickey Bennett as Al's father!

The bill is completed by an all-Technicolor Vitaphone Variety, "A Holiday in Storyland," presented by a large company of precocious juveniles, and the Universal News, made comprehensible by the engaging chatter of Graham McNamee, announcer.
